Farmers and Industry

The average fruit grower does not realize how closely his prosperity is related to advertising. We can all remember when apples, prunes, and berries went begging for a market in Western Washington and Oregon. To cut a concrete illustration, take loganberries, strawberries and raspberries in the Willamette valley, Oregon. A few years ago in the height of the season the growers could hardly give them away. The territory for shipment was limited and there was nothing to do with them.

Then came the manufacturing era of berries. Business men saw the raw material going to waste and decided to make a fruit juice, jam and canned products for national consumption. They realized what the farmer did not, that they must create a market—good fruit was no good unless you could sell it. Hundreds of thousands of dollars were spent advertising loganberry products in the newspapers and magazines of the country. People who had never heard of loganberry juice wondered what it was and in a few short years the manufacturers of small fruit products had developed a national industry requiring more raw material than could be supplied.

As the price of small fruits advanced until today it is the most profitable crop the farmer can raise. Industry has made farming profitable and it is now up to the farmers to supply the raw material and co-operate with the manufacturing end of farming.

The farmers could have raised berries for the next hundred years and starved to death at it if commercial interests had not taken hold of the proposition and through publicity and a manufactured product created a market and a demand for the farmers' output. That is why the farmer must stand shoulder to shoulder with industry for his own best interests.

FEW SEE SECOND CENTURY

Not Many Claiming to Be Over One Hundred Years of Age Can Prove It.

Sea serpents being out of date, and "wild men" somewhat exhausted of interest, there comes the recent story of a Kentucky man who celebrated the 131st anniversary of his birth by taking his first motor car ride.

When a report of this sort is investigated it usually is found to lack proof.

Some years ago, at a meeting of the Actuarial Society of America, its president, John K. Gore, said: "The well-known cases of individuals commonly believed to have lived a century and a quarter and even much longer have not in any instance been verified."

There is usually temptation to exaggerate the age of extremely old persons; often they do it themselves. Not very long ago a man in England, interested in the study of human longevity, offered $5,000 to any man or woman living at the time who could prove that he or she was 100 years old or more. There were hundreds of claimants, but in no case was irrefragable proof submitted.

In point of longevity, women are far ahead of men, generally speaking. They are more resistant to diseases and they live longer. And yet women are called the "weaker sex." So they are, muscularly, but it is manifest that they are the stronger sex constitutionally. They possess what biologists term greater "viability"—a superior ability to survive.

MORGAN NOT ALWAYS HARD

Great Financier Proved He Had Kindly Heart as Well as a Keen Business Mind.

There is no better test of a man's bigness than his way of handling subordinates who make mistakes.

J. Pierpont Morgan, the elder, had a clerk who, living beyond his means, sought to make up the balance through speculation; and, having failed, helped himself to the firm's money.

The culprit was called into Mr. Morgan's private office.

He expected arrest. Instead he was told to go home and tell his wife all about it. "And tomorrow morning," said Mr. Morgan, "see me again."

The clerk obeyed, and Mr. Morgan, to the young fellow's amazement, handed him in bills the full amount of his speculation—$5,400—with: "Put that back where you took the other from. It is a loan from me, and I expect you to return it as soon as you can. None of the other clerks know anything about it. Let me see if you can't be a man."

After many months the youngster returned to Mr. Morgan the last dollar of the debt.

After counting the pile of bills on his desk, to which he had added those just given him, Mr. Morgan observed:

"Well, my boy, it was a big hauler saving it than losing it, I'll warrant. Now take it home and give it to your wife. It's a safe bet that she saved most of it."—Boston Post.

One Car to 24 Persons.

There is a motor vehicle in the United States for every 24 persons; in Canada the proportion is probably one to each 50; in England, one to 200; in Denmark, one to 300, and in France, Belgium, Holland, Switzerland and Germany about one to every 400, says the Compressed Air Magazine, New York. In 1917 it was estimated that Italy had one car to each 1,000 of population; Portugal to each 1,800, Spain to each 1,900, Austria-Hungary, to each 2,050, and Russia to each 5,000. In Australia there was one for each 140 of population, and in South America, as a whole, one for each 1,430.

Many a minor city in the United States has more cars than the whole of China or Japan.

Famous Art Collection.

The unique collection of Chinese works of art made by the late Li Hung Chang, one-time viceroy of China, which for years collectors tried vainly to acquire, has finally been bought by a Swedish syndicate. The purchase price is understood to have been more than a million krona (nominally about $250,000), but the intrinsic value of the collection is incalculable.

Li Hung Chang died in 1901. He had a collection of works of art larger than anything of its kind in the empire. It included numerous old paintings, bronzes of great worth and ancient ceramics. The bronzes date from a time before Christ, and the paintings were done from the tenth to the twelfth centuries.

Radium Economy.

The use of radium on a large scale therapeutically involves danger of loss, and this factor has been a big one in inducing hospitals and clinics with a gram or more of the element in use to utilize radium emanation instead of applicators containing the radium itself. There has been installed in a Pittsburgh laboratory an elegant and useful apparatus for the collection, purification and tubing of radium emanation obtained from a salt of the element. It differs from earlier apparatus in that liquid air is replaced by chemical means of purifying the emanations, which are felt to be more reliable.—Scientific American.

WOMEN TO HEAR INTERESTING TALK

Mrs. Bowen to Tell of China Tomorrow; Talk to Students in Evening

To a crowd at the Methodist Church Dr. Bowen last night spoke of obedience to Christ as the great essential of success in life. He took his text from the words of Christ to Peter, "Launch out into the deep, and let down your nets for a draught," and showed that though the commands of God might seem unreasonable, yet when they were obeyed they not only brought success but created in the one obeying a love and reverence for Christ that is the first step in a life of perfect peace and power. It was a message of singular simplicity, and one that made a great impression on the people who listened. The earnestness of the church membership is visibly increasing.

This afternoon, Dr. Bowen gave the last of his Bible readings and tomorrow, at the regular afternoon hour, Mrs. Bowen will address a meeting of women and girls, on "The Old and New China."

The women of Albany are cordially invited to head her, especially the members of the Women's Missionary Societies of other churches. Mrs. Bowen's experiences while a missionary in China, together with her college training and her experience as a speaker since returning to her home in America, have fitted her to give a message of unparalleled interest.

Hobbling Industry

President Cornish of National Lead Co. in commenting in regard to repeal of excess profit tax law says the present law penalizes ability and efficiency and discourages new enterprises.

"No one would embark in a new industry, unless he has hopes of larger profits than the average investment yields. The excess profits tax destroys such hopes. The tax encourages sellers to put prices on properties and commodities, that would produce what they considered a fair profit on the transaction plus an amount to cover the tax that they estimate would have to be paid.

"It encourages wasteful expenditures, unreasonably high compensation to officers and employes, minimizes the advantages of thrift and industry, and destroys the morale not only of the concerns directly affected but also others affected by the example."

JOHN J. PERSHING

he struck with a blow that sent the Huns reeling back and had the armistice not been signed when it was, two weeks or little more, would have seen Germany thoroughly crushed and beaten back on her own soil, with a large part of her army in the hands of the Americans.

General Pershing, before the audience in Portland this week told of how America ended the war. He stated that at the great council at Grand Army Headquarters the allied generals did not seem anxious to take over the Meuse-Argonne sector for the final attack. But he deliberately chose this route because it was the shortest distance to the German lines and offered the most direct route to victory.

He knew, too, that it was the strongest part of the German defenses and was guarded with 47 divisions of their best troops, while he threw 27 divisions of Americans into the fray. But he knew the American soldier and knew what he would do. After 47 days of fighting the results were proved, and General Pershing's tactics and strategy had done that which no allied staff had dared do before. It was the last blow of the war and the one that spelled defeat for the Kaiser's forces.
