GERMANY AND WILHELM

Immediately after the allied council had asked Holland to surrender Wilhelm Hohenzollern, the cables announced that "profound anxiety and astonishment reign in Pan-German circles in Germany over the official demand of the Allies for the extradition from Holland of the former German emperor." The German people in general seem to have been shocked and angered by the demand.

Why they should take it in that way must remain a mystery to non-Germans. They should not be surprised, because they have been told all along what was to be done. Moreover, they themselves have a legitimate grievance against their former Kaiser, because of the tragic plight he got them into. And legally, if not ethically, it is their duty to help the Allies to get him.

Germany agreed, as one of the terms of the peace treaty, to surrender Wilhelm and other malefactors guilty of barbarous breaches of international law in their war activities. If Wilhelm were in Germany today, it would be incumbent on the German Government to turn him over as a matter of course. Inasmuch as he is a fugitive from Germany, it became necessary to apply to Holland, which as a sovereign nation has the right to disregard the request if it chooses. What Holland may refuse the Allies she would not be likely to refuse Germany, since it is peculiarly Germany's affair.

If Germany, therefore, were inclined to do her duty and fulfill her pledges, in letter or in spirit. Germany herself would ask Holland to extradite Wilhelm, and would then turn him over to the allied court for trial.

That, however, is probably too much to expect. Germany prefers to take advantage of a technicality, with Holland's connivance, and protect her own worst enemy—because he is a German.

THERE'S SOMEBODY AT HOME

It is difficult to find people at home, complains a census enumerator. He says he has had to make repeated calls in order to finish his job. He was a city enumerator, in a large city at that, and probably what he says has only a limited application the country over. He declares that in apartment houses especially he made call after call and could not get audience with a majority of the residents listed there. He deduces therefrom that we are becoming a nation of rovers, jazzers and home-shunners.

Of course the enumerator is generalizing too broadly from limited observation. That he found few families at home in the modern apartment house is not an unexpected disclosure. The walls of the ordinary city apartment are not very companionable, and even the most confirmed homebody is to be pardoned if the street or the movie palace affords more appealing attractions. But the enumerator should ask for a transfer to a small town, to a country section, or even to a more distinctly residence district of the big city, and give himself an opportunity of reviving his faith in our home folks. Beneath a million hospitable roofs he could find at any hour he elects to call a wife, a mother and a family awaiting the return of a beloved worker or wanderer.

WANTED: A school of illustrative art that will make fashion-ad figures look human.

It's Time to Get Ready To Start

To make a good garden you have "got to get everything organized", as Gale says. We have a hundred or so of those splendid Government War Garden Guides left over from last year. We had two thousand. You can have a copy free for the asking, but you'll have to hurry.

TODAY'S EVENTS

The city of Milwaukee enters upon its seventy-fifth year today.

Centenary of the birth of William B. Washburn, governor of Massachusetts and the successor of Charles Sumner in the senate.

Portugal observes today as Memorial Day, in celebration of the anniversary of the first attempt to establish a republic, in 1891.

Oklahoma Socialists meet in State convention at Oklahoma City today to name a State ticket and select delegates to the national convention.

"Cleopatra's Night," an American-made opera from the story of Theophile Gautier, is to have its premiere this afternoon at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York.

Senator Miles Poindexter of Washington, Senator Medill McCormick of Illinois, President Rush Rhees of the University of Rochester, and other men of prominence are to be guests of the Society of the Genesee at its annual dinner in New York city tonight.

Representatives of every labor and civic organization in the state of New York have been invited by the Socialist party to be represented at a convention at Albany today to protest against the suspension of the five Socialist members of the general assembly.

Events of Sunday, Feb. 1

Centenary of the birth of Horace C. Johnson, celebrated American painter.

France today will turn the clocks ahead one hour as a fuel conservation measure.

President Garfield of Williams College will deliver the annual Founder's Day address at Hampton Institute today.

To turn the popular mind in the direction of music New York city will observe the week beginning today as Music week.

Josephus Daniels, Secretary of the Navy, will be the speaker at a dinner to be given in New York today in behalf of the Zionist Organization in America.

Between three and four million tea chests are required for the Indian tea crop each year. The wood used in these chests is of a very special kind. It must contain no sap that would corrode the tea-lead in which the tea is packed; must be free from any odor, as tea will take that up readily, and must be well seasoned so that it will not warp.

Comment of the State Press

Snappy Gleanings from the Press of the Valley

Less Meat—

Americans are eating 8 per cent less meat than they did 20 years ago and the government is wondering whether costs or changing tastes are responsible. Probably tastes have changed due to costs.—East Oregonian.

Gum and Tobacco—

We wonder how many of our readers know that five times as much money is spent for chewing gum as for education, and 25 times more money spent for tobacco than is spent on our schools. We are speaking of our own United States only. The facts have been proven by statistics.—Polk County Itemizer.

Social Theorist—

So around and around, like spirals in a cage, social theorists revolve. In the vacuum world in which they are there is little resistance to their whirling. They are forever in movement, yet they never arrive, and they lose all sense of reality.

Portland Post Master—

The primary impulse behind the removal of Postmaster Myers was the consuming desire of the leaders of the democratic party, or most of them, to get rid of him. His capacity for making trouble was unlimited; his gift of unpopularity was great. He was a party liability, and they have striven long and hard to convince the administration at Washington that it must act, if the party in Oregon was to be saved from complete demoralization.—Oregonian.

Thrift Year—

This year of grace, 1920, is to be a thrift year, which means that we should buy less, and to that purpose the present value of the American dollar is admirably suited.—Telegram.

Future Handbook—

The future handbook on twentieth century politics will contain this definition: "Parlor Bolshevist: A rare species of the politico-genus homo, originating in the spume of the great war. A plush covered, political anemic, singular in appearance and perverted in principle, with more money than brains and a tendency toward loose morals."—Portland Telegram.
