NO MORE HARPSBURGS

Nations seem to learn surprisingly little from history, even when it is their own history. Hungary, after all she has suffered from monarchy, has voted for a return of monarchic rule. And for a monarch she wants another Hapsburg!

Ordinarily it would hardly be considered anybody else's business what kind of ruler Hungary might have. But it is difficult in this case. The war started by the Hapsburgs, which in origin and character was quite in keeping with the Hapsburg history and traditions, has led to a stern resolve on the part of the dominant powers that never again will that unprincipled dynasty be tolerated.

Europe is fed up on Hapsburgs. The Allies have therefore served notice on Hungary that "such a restoration of a dynasty which to its subjects represented a system of coercion and domination in Alliance with Germany over other races would not be consistent either with the principles for which this war has been fought or with the result of the liberation of subject peoples which has been achieved, and that the choice of a Hapsburg would be at variance with the peace settlement, and can be neither recognized nor tolerated."

Europe is fed up on Hohenzollerns, too, and any attempt to set any of that brood on any throne will call forth a similar prohibition.

This incident, however, shows that the curse is seated deeper than most people have thought. The evil is not eradicated when the autocrats are removed. Like Aesop's frogs, the foolish people may still clamor for a king, and court their own destruction. The monarchy idea is strong yet throughout Central Europe. There is still too much Hapsburg in Hungary and Austria, and too much Hohenzollern in Germany. Before the world is really safe, the people themselves must be democratized. That is a slower process than kicking kings off their thrones.

INTERNATIONALIZED WATERWAYS

The League of Nations, though awaiting participation of the United States for entrance into its full sphere of action, is already operating in several important respects. One of them is the control of the internationalized navigable rivers of Europe.

The Scheldt just now affords a good example of what is to be expected along this line. Belgium and Holland, after decades of disagreement, have finally adjusted their rival claims to that stream. Holland, holding both sides of its mouth, is no longer to dominate it as she did in the war, to the great embarrassment of Belgium, whose seaport, Antwerp, could be reached from the sea only through neutral territory. There is to be henceforth joint control of the Scheldt by the two countries. They are to co-operate in a new system of auxiliary canals, and questions of dispute are to be referred by them to the League of Nations.

The much more important streams, the Rhine and Danube, through which the heart of Europe is reached by seaborne commerce and wants of a dozen interior nations are supplied, will be developed and controlled in the same enlightened way.

Comments of the State Press

If We Had Men—

If we had as many men interested in electing capable public officials as we have interested in being elected themselves, this would be an exceptionally well governed nation.—Columbian.

Loss to The Nation—

The resignation of Franklin K. Lane as Secretary of the Interior is a distinct loss to the nation. He is one of the strong, clean men who have grown up in the West, and in all his official acts he has carefully guarded the interests of the people of this section, knowing well as he does the value of our national resources and the possibilities of development lying in the future.—Eugene Guard.

Elect Him President—

W. L. Douglas' three dollar shoe advertising is credited with having elected him governor of Massachusetts once upon a time. Now it would elect him president hands down.—Ex.

Death Penalty—

When the death penalty was abolished by popular vote in Oregon the proposal carried by only 157 majority. That it will be restored by a very much larger majority is now generally admitted.—Lebanon Express

Biliousness

WHEN you have a bilious attack your liver fails to perform its functions. You become constipated. The food you eat ferments in your stomach instead of digesting. This inflames the stomach and causes nausea, vomiting and a terrible headache. Take Chamberlain's Tablets. They will tone up your liver, clean out your stomach and you will soon be as well as ever. There is nothing better.
