

WAR RISK POLICIES SUBJECT TO RULING

Under a new and very liberal ruling of far-reaching importance to millions of former service men, issued by Director R. G. Cholmeley Jones of the Bureau of War Risk Insurance with the approval of Secretary of the Treasury Carter Glass, War Risk (term) Insurance, regardless of how long it may have been lapsed or canceled, and regardless of how long the former service man may have been discharged, may be reinstated any time before July 1, 1920.

The only conditions are:
(1) Two months premiums on the amount of insurance to be reinstated must accompany the application.

(2) The applicant must be in as good health as at the date of discharge or at the expiration of the grace period, whichever is the later date, and so state in the application.

The new ruling is the most important liberalization of the War Risk Insurance since the passage of the Sweet bill, and is designed for the special benefit of service men who failed to reinstate their insurance prior to the new law, and who have been discharged more than 18 months.

Ex-service men may still reinstate their lapsed term insurance at any time within 18 months following the month of discharge by complying with the same conditions. Within three months following the month of discharge reinstatement may be made by simply retaining two months' premiums without a formal application or statement as to health.

Reinstatement may also be made after 18 months following discharge, as follows: If the insurance has not been lapsed longer than three months, by complying with the conditions outlined in (1) and (2) above. From the fourth to the eleventh month, inclusive, after lapse, by complying with the same conditions, and in addition submitting a formal report of the examination made by a reputable physician substantiating the statement of health to the satisfaction of the Director of the Bureau.

PRINCETON MEN TO HONOR THEIR DEAD ON SATURDAY, FEB. 21

As a tribute to the 146 Princeton men who died in the nation's service in the late war, Saturday, February 21, will be observed throughout the country by Princeton men as Princeton Memorial Day. An announcement to this effect was made today by President John Grier Hibben of Princeton University. On that date the memorial to the Princeton hero dead, which for the last six months has been under construction at Princeton, will be dedicated, and memorial services will be held simultaneously in every city, town or hamlet in the United States where there are Princeton men.

The program for these services will be given at the same time in all places. A "minute of silence" is included in the program, to be observed by Princeton men in memory of their fallen fellow collegians.

The dedication exercises and memorial services in communities going by eastern time will occur at 5:30 p. m. The time for the meetings in other places will be arranged accordingly. For example, the hour in the central time will be 4:30 o'clock p. m.

Franklin D'Olier, National Commander of the American Legion, who was graduated from Princeton with the Class of 1898, will deliver the dedication address at Princeton. President Hibben also will speak.

HOW RIFLES ARE MADE

Did you ever Realize How Much Workmanship is Required to turn out a High Class Shooting Arm?

By Captain W. H. Richard

(Small Bore Rifle Champion of the United States)

It makes no great difference what particular model you happen to own or have for use, there are some facts that will apply to any of them. Did you ever realize as you look over your pet rifle just how much care and workmanship has been required upon it before it was ready for your hands?

From the moment the iron ore has been taken from the mines, transferred into metal, and the metal into steel tubes, it has been continuously passing through skilled hands that have been modeling it into shape and putting it together piece by piece until it is a perfectly accurate and safe rifle given into your possession for use and keeping. After that it is up to you.

The rough steel tube is bored straight through the center by means of a long drill held in a very heavy machine which is set in a cement foundation to insure little or no vibration or wobbling during the operation. The tube is then turned down on the outside to the required size of the barrel and polished by machine and by hand.

The barrel, as drilled, contains no spirals or grooves, but is of the size or diameter of the caliber. The bore is carefully measured and the barrel is then taken to another machine for rifling. Here is where the spirals or grooves are cut in, one at a time, by a cutter on the end of a rod which takes off a very thin shaving of the steel as it is drawn through the barrel. The cutter is stationary and the barrel is drawn backward and forward by the machine and turned at the same time to give the proper pitch or twist. The steel is shaved away to exactly the same depth for each groove and carefully measured to less than .0001 of an inch variation in depth and bore.

What this means can scarcely be imagined but take your ruler and look at the inch measure, then try in your mind to divide the inch into 1000 parts. By this you will see that it is only with the greatest of care that the barrel can be made perfect and you can appreciate how easily the careless workman could ruin it.

After the barrel is rifled it is taken to the leading process where the rough cutting edges are polished away which gives you the bright mirror effect to the new clean barrel and which insures the smooth and even passage of the bullet through it when fired. The outside of the barrel is now polished and made ready for the bluing or browning process. The barrel is tightly corked at each end to keep out the various acids used in working up the fine blue finish of the outside. The purpose of this process is to preserve the steel from rust and to improve its outward appearance.

While your barrel has been going through the above operation the other parts of your rifle have also been prepared in various other rooms of the plant. The receiver is cut and polished into proper size and shape. All the little parts are made with the same care, carefully measured, fitted and tested and the stock is cut and fitted.

It finally reaches the assembling room in as many different parts as there are pieces in the entire rifle. Here it is put together and sent to the proving room where it is fired with excessive loads after which it is carefully gauged and measured to see that it has successfully withstood the strain. It is shot for accuracy, sights lined up and again inspected before it is finally packed as the finished product.

BERMUDA BECOMES OASIS FOR THIRSTY

HAMILTON, BERMUDA.—Posted conspicuously in the lobby of a big local hotel is a placard which reads: "Bermuda still has license. We expect our patrons to exercise common sense. We do not care how little they drink; excess will not be tolerated."

Some islanders affect to see a promise of a great future founded on the dollars of American tourists who, they believe, will flock hither as to an oasis. Others look with apprehension on the prospect. Meantime the conduct of the tourists is being watched with an unusual degree of interest. Some among the new arrivals do not hesitate to say that they made the trip largely in expectation of throwing of restraint of their homeland.

"We come here to seek freedom," declared a new arrival as he planted his feet against the brass rail of a local bar. We have to seek liberty under the folds of the British flag; wherever the Union Jack waves one can take a drink unmolested."

A companion who ventured to call his attention to the state of affairs in Newfoundland and certain Canadian provinces where the British flag waves bone-dry regions, was pooh-pooed.
