USE OF OREGON PRODUCTS URGED

Best Interests Served When Each Patronizes the Other

When the local base-ball club needs new suits who do you go to for a donation? Who contributes to the church social? Who pays for the street assessments for paving the main street of your town.

Those are the questions asked the residents of the State by A. G. Clark, manager of the Associated Industries of Oregon, in his effort to create a larger consumption of Oregon products.

Consumers who buy from concerns other than those of their own locality do not realize that they are sending away money that could be used in the development of their own community. They do not see that when money is needed for local development must come from the merchant or the manufacturer who is located in the community, and not the outside concern.

Oregon manufacturers and business men of all classes have willingly given jobs to returned soldiers. It remains for the consumers now to demand Oregon Made Products to keep these factories and business houses going and thus create steady employment for men returned from overseas.

"It is absolutely vital to the continued prosperity of the State," said Mr. Clark, in a recent interview, "that the consumer realize the necessity of buying home products."

"The Oregon merchants, manufacturers and farmers will do their part waiting for the chance to prove that Oregon can produce just as good if the consumer will only ask for Oregon-Made goods. They are only products as any State in the Union".
