

DISLIKES ROLE OF ANANIAS

But in Such a Situation, Woman Will or Pathetically Pleads, What Could She Say?

When I was a little girl and set to learn my catechism, considerable emphasis was laid by my elders on that clause of my duty to my neighbor which enjoins one "To hurt nobody by word or deed," and not enough was placed on King David's statement, "All men are liars." Mary Alice Owen writes in Twilight Hour Magazine. Ordinarily, I am a truthful person, but that creed, "To hurt nobody by word or deed," has become so imbedded in my inner consciousness that, as my slung nephew would say, "Ananias has nothing on me," in instances of trial.

For instance: A proud mother exhibited to me, not very long ago, a floppy bundle, smelling hygienically of castle soap and new flannel. "Isn't she the most beautiful baby you ever saw?" she exclaimed ecstatically. I inspected those eyes, whose counterpart is generally seen in aquariums, that dab of a nose which seemed staring or winking to give it some fineness of outline, that long, loose wet mouth. I gave one look at that mother in whose breast burned the maternal ardor of a royal Bengal tigress. "Yes," I meekly answered, although my own little grand nieces and nephews are artists' dreams of loveliness, as those who have had the privilege of seeing them told me when pressed for a candid opinion. I owe an apology to my own flesh and blood, but what else could I say? I appeal for a statement, to the general public, ministers not excepted, what else could I say?

"Always at Your Service"

Woodman, Woodman, Spare That Tree

Don't try to chop expenses in furnishing your clothes tree and expect it to bear fruit. To look good you must look to good clothes and since the prices of poor garments are so high you should be all the more careful.

All Wool—that's the stuff. Hand Tailoring—that's your style.

Clothes that combine the two cost more of course, but they give more.

This store is still hanging on to old standards and high qualities for dear life. So for goodness sake don't you let go.

You'll find good clothes here at fair prices. You'll like our way of showing them too.

$40,000 BONDS VOTED IN SCIO

Only Nine Voters Had the Nerve to Vote Against The Measure

Scio votes $40,000 to build an electric plant on Thomas creek, in Jordan, to supply the town of Scio and the farmers along the proposed line who are to patronize the new project. The vote for the bonds was 110 for and nine against, the proposed development, which shows that the people are practically a unit in making a step in advance. Engineer Cunningham, of Portland, who made the survey is willing to guarantee delivering 208 horse power in Scio at extreme low water, in Thomas creek. The old plant has a 35 horse power and with 173 additional horse power it gives an opportunity to greatly expand the business. The city council is to take active steps, in the near future, to build the proposed line, and in the course of a few months have the metropolis of the Santiam country strictly in the progressive column of the towns of the state.

EMINENT LYRIC SOPRANO COMING

Singer to be Heard in Albany Has Been Coached by Enrico Caruso

Josephine Martins who appears in the Lyceum Course next Monday night has attracted the attention of President Wilson who heard this gifted young artist sing last year and complimented her personally. Enrico Caruso has taken great interest in the work in Miss Martins. He has coached her in a number of the operatic pieces she will use in her appearance in Albany. She is a lyric soprano of remarkable talent and personality.

There will be other eminent artists who will appear in Lyceum next Monday night March 1, 8 p. m. at the Methodist church under the patronage of the Elks Lodge. Admission 75 cents. Students 50 cents.

Say, who is in love with these frosty mornings (those who don't have to get up—Ed.) the droughty weather and "fluency" atmosphere? Here's hoping for an early arrival of Aquarius and his water wagon with at least enough moisture to rejuvenate the inhabitants of the editor's fish pond.

HISTORY OF LEBANON TO BE WRITTEN BY SENIOR STUDENTS

Hilda Clandall, Ellnor Everett and Mabel Green, senior students of the Lebanon High school were Albany visitors this afternoon gathering material for a pioneer Albany citizens preparatory to writing the history of Lebanon, which is named after the home town of the Ralston and other pioneer families who came from Lebanon Ohio. The Santiam Academy which was formerly occupied by the present high school campus was established by the Methodist church in the year 1854. For many years it was one of the leading pioneer schools of the valley. It was discontinued by the Methodist after the denomination decided to centralize their efforts in the one school the Willamette University at Salem. The school site still has a small endowment from which the interest is used to assist the district high school.

Economy Corner

The small boy is not much occupied with thoughts of his clothes, except that he wants them to look like those worn by his running mates. Whether his shirtwaists, trousers or coats are made at home and from materials that have seen service before being bequeathed to him, is no concern of his. Occasionally he takes a proud satisfaction in the knowledge that he is wearing clothes that his father or uncles have worn before him, and in view of the mounting cost of his belongings these sources of supply should be considered.

Very good qualities in percales, madras and silk are used for making men's shirts, but even so the wear and tear of laundering frays out collar bands and cuffs long before the body of the shirts show any signs of wear. The frayed cuffs and collar bands are intolerable and the shirts are discarded. The soft-tanned kind are used by thrifty mothers to make waists for their small boys. Silk shirts are often made over into shirtwaists for girls or grown-up members of the family as the small boy is not outfitted with silks.

Really good woolen materials stand washing as well as cottons. A suit to be made over for the little boy should be ripped up and the goods in it washed according to the usual method of washing woollens. If it shrinks a little no harm is done. When it is pressed and made up into a suit for the youngster the material is really as good as new. In case it has worn shiny it should be turned, placing the wrong side out. In boys' suits even more than in grown-ups two pairs of pants for one coat is economical. A suit with two pairs of pants will wear more than twice as long as a suit with only one pair. It is not particularly difficult to make boys' clothes. The pants, if cut by a reliable pattern, are easy. When the coat is undertaken the lining should be first cut and fitted, using a simple pattern as a guide.

Discarded shirts of percale and madras are used by many housewives for making aprons. There is a great variety of patterns for the smaller aprons that are needed by every woman who busies herself at home with housework or sewing. The shirts are ripped up, washed and the material pressed. The designers of patterns have seen to it that a number of practical aprons are made up of several sections of cloth and this makes it easy to cut them from other garments.

Waists to Match Suits.

Waists in shades to match winter suits are especially popular. They are most effective when combined with contrasting colors, either by use of narrow vestees, embroidery of floss and beads, or dainty ruffled collars.
