NOTED EDITOR TO LECTURE AT O. A. C.

Mrs. Alice P. Norton Will Give Two Weeks Course Soon

Oregon Agriculture College, Corvallis.—Mrs. Alice P. Norton, editor of the Journal of Home Economics, and considered one of the best authorities in home economics in the country, will give a two-week lecture course in the 1920 summer session at the college. Her lectures will come the second and third weeks of summer school.

Mrs. Norton is one of the pioneers in home economics work, having had broad training. During the war period she divided her time between the Journal and the food administration in Washington. She was appointed to the United States treasury department in thrift work after the signing of the armistice and is still aiding in this work.

Crack Team Expected
Oregon Agriculture College, Corvallis.—What is hoped to be one of the strongest crack teams in the history of the Oregon Agricultural College is being developed under the paternal care of Mike Butler and the watchful eye of Coach Hargiss.

Every evening between 4 and 5 o'clock, speed merchants can be seen running around the indoor track in the armory, unlimbering their muscles and getting in shape to put the Beaver team on the map. Many old men
