NOTICE OF SALE OF GOVERNMENT TIMBER

General Land Office, Washington, D. C., February 11, 1920.
Notice is hereby given that subject to the conditions and limitations of the Act of June 9, 1916 (39 Stat. 218), and the instructions of the Secretary of the Interior of September 15, 1917, the timber on the following lands will be sold April 2, 1920, at 10 o'clock A. M., at public auction at the United States land office at Roseburg, Oregon, to the highest bidder at not less than the appraised value as shown by this notice, sale to be subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Interior. The purchase price, with an additional sum of one-fifth of one percent thereof, being commissions allowed, must be deposited at time of sale, money to be returned if sale is not approved, otherwise patent will issue for the timber which must be removed within ten years. Bids will be received from citizens of the United States, associations of such citizens and corporations organized under the laws of the United States or any state, territory or district thereof only. Upon application of a qualified purchaser, the timber on any legal subdivision will be offered separately before being included in any offer of a larger unit.

PEN PICTURE OF KAISER DRAWN BY ROOSEVELT

Letter of Late Ex-President Gives Clever Description of William

NEW YORK, Feb. 28—By Associated Press—An intimate pen-picture of the former Emperor of Germany, drawn by Colonel Roosevelt in a letter to Sir George Otto Trevelyan in 1911, which shows him in the light of an "adorer" of England, appears in the March number of Scribner's Magazine out tomorrow.

It is the concluding portion of Roosevelt's personal 25,000 word account of his travels in Egypt and Europe following his return from his memorable African hunting trip.

The former President wrote that William agreed with him, during the course of a long interview at Potsdam, that war between England and Germany would be "an unspeakable calamity." The Colonel said that Prince Henry of Prussia, of whom the then Kaiser was "rather jealous", was "a more really powerful and cold-blooded man" than the Emperor and that of the two, he was the more hostile to England.

Referring to his visit to Berlin, following "delightful" receptions in Belgium, Holland, Denmark, Norway and Sweden, the Colonel wrote that the German authorities and people showed him every courtesy and civility but that, excepting the university flock, "they really did not want to see me." America, he said, was very unpopular in Germany. The upper classes regarded democracy, he said, as "irregular, unnatural and debasing. The lower classes, on the other hand, were Socialists who regarded me as an enemy rather than a friend. The middle class looked upon me as a representative of an America which consisted of business rivals whose rivalry was irritating an obnoxious."

An interesting sidelight on von Tirpitz, then the Secretary of War, was afforded by the Colonel's reference to an interview with the man who later inaugurated the ruthless submarine warfare. Von Tirpitz, he said, was intensely interested in the voyage of the American battlefleet around the world, and he told the former President that he had not believed "we could do it successfully," adding that the British naval and foreign offices had felt the same way. "He said he expected Japan would attack the fleet while it was on its way round."

"I told him," he wrote, "that I had not expected such an attack, but that I had thought it possible; in other words, that I thought the chances were against it, but there was a chance for it. My point of view at that for it. My point of view at the time the fleet sailed, was that if the Japanese attacked it, it was a certain sign that they were intending to attack us at the first favorable opportunity."

"I had been doing my best to be polite to the Japanese and had finally become uncomfortably conscious of a very, very slight undercurrent of veiled truculence in their communications in connection with things that happened on the Pacific slope; and I finally made up my mind that they thought I was afraid of them."

"Every particle of trouble with the Japanese government and the Japanese press stopped like magic as soon as they found that our fleet had actually sailed, and was obviously in good trim. As I told von Tirpitz, I thought it a good thing that the Japanese should know there were fleets of the white races which were totally different from the fleet of poor Rojstvensky." Von Tirpitz and William, he said, told him that they regarded the voyage of the fleet as having "done more for peace in the Orient than anything else that could possibly have happened."
