"THE DARK STAR" BASED ON FAMOUS CHAMBER'S NOVEL

There are many unusual features in the film dramatization of the famous novel of Robert W. Chambers "The Dark Star" which appears at the Globe Theatre Sunday night starring the beautiful Marion Davies and well known Matt Moore.

The story deals with the underground workings of the German secret service and the events that led up to the fate outbreak of the great war in 1914. The title is from the Dark Star Erik, a dead planet which is supposed to have an evil effect upon those born under its influence. Among the children of this "Black Racer of the Skies" are all the main characters of the story.

Wrecking the American mission in Turkey, death of a German spy, sinking of a liner in mid-ocean by Hun agents and the astounding fight at the rendezvous of the German secret agents in Paris are among a few of the outstanding features of the picture. The cast is admirable throughout and the play one of the best of the year.

Large Cast in Picture

One of the largest casts ever required for an ordinary length motion picture was necessary for "Men, Women and Money," Ethel Clayton's new Paramount picture, which was directed by George Melford, and which will be shown at the Globe theatre Monday.
