HARRISBURG, Ore., March 24—

"Sports Togs" is a short caption for a long story since there are sports togs of many kinds. The most fascinating and interesting of these are the clothes that have borrowed the character of those garments made for real sports wear but not intended for service. Just "for looks." The sweater coats and varied scarfs made of silk or wool in many fanciful and fragile ways, the delicate colored headwear and the very handsome skirts of sports silks are all examples of sports clothes made to be admired for their beauty, not for the usefulness of the sportswoman. They serve a very useful purpose, however. No matter how elegant and rich their materials these clothes are informal and very smart in character. They are a part of the play—the sports clothes of onlookers—in which they are well enough dressed and not too much dressed for whatever the day may bring.

After the brilliant skirts of heavy, rough silk weaves the most interesting members of the sports family are the scarfs and sweaters that are refined and glorified modifications of their forerunners, the warm woolen scarf and sweater. The new scarfs are in light and brilliant colors, in angora wool and in silk and they are variously made. One pretty new scarf in bright green is crocheted of silk with a fringe at the ends.

Other scarfs in light-colored plaids, of angora wool, have a diagonal seam at the center, which allows them to set snugly to the figure when worn over the shoulders. They are finished with fringe in the colors of the scarf.

The short knitted sweater-coats of silk or silk fiber usually open at the front and have a nash knitted of the same silk, but there are some very pretty slipover styles with square neck opening at the front from which fall narrow plaitings of fine white lace.

The strong yarn golf socks shown in the picture are meant for real service and proud is the possessor of a hand-knitted pair. The pair at the left is knitted in diamond-shaped blocks of contrasting color with cross-bars of black while the other pair is in solid color with bars and dots contrasting.

ROLLED OATS—Albers, No. 10 sack 69c

As we see it is refusing to spend unwisely. That man is thrifty no matter what he spends, if the return is greater than the outlay. Spending money for equipment that reduces the cost of production is thrift; spending money for advertising that reduces the cost of selling, is thrift. Paying full value for merchandise of high quality and known satisfaction is thrift. Thrift cannot be measured by outlay—it must be measured by returns.

Use your ability to practice THRIFT!

OREGON HENS WIN CONTEST

Oregon Agricultural College, Corvallis, Mar. 24.—Prof. James Dryden's hens, which are known all over America and in many foreign countries for their egg laying proclivities, have won again. A pen of barred rocks took first place for the month of February in the Washington State college egg laying contest, and single bird made the best individual record for the month, producing "hen fruit" number 28 in 29 days.

This pen is gaining rapidly on the leaders in the contest. It was in sixth place at the end of the month but it is expected to be on the top or not far from it at the end of the contest. Birds of the same strain are now on farms in all sections of Oregon and are aiding farmers in boosting their profits.

A highway map prepared by the State Highway Department of Georgia has been produced for the first time. The total mileage of the system is 4,800, exclusive of mileage within the limits of incorporated towns. Every courthouse in the state is included in the system.
