LEBANON FARMER SELLS PLANTS

As a means of developing his orchard tract in the outskirts of the city of Lebanon, Harvey Loveall last year set out a large patch of Wilson and Magoon strawberry plants and in the fall encouraged them to set new plants. Recently he received one single order from a Portland firm for 30,000 of the plants and has sold upwards of 70,000 to home buyers with a prospect that he will yet sell enough to increase his sales to 150,000 before the season is over.

valley, but it is one that points the way to what the valley will eventually be.

It is not alone strawberries that grow so prolifically here, but every other kind of small fruit finds its natural environment in the climate and soil of this district. Within the past two years many acres of red raspberries have been set out and they have made a phenomenal growth and many of them will be in full bearing this year, as will acres upon acres of loganberries that have been planted during the same period.

In raising strawberry plants C. H.

Witman has done fully as well as Mr. Loveall and several others who have given their attention to plant raising have found a market for the plants that will take up their entire output, and as the energy of the people becomes more and more directed in this line it will not be an over estimate to say that there will be no place in the state that will have more prosperous people, and the name "Strawberry City" will not be a misnomer.

TRADE MARK

Farm Tractor

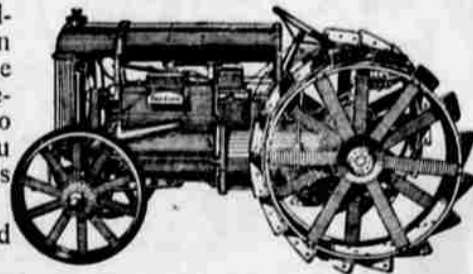

There is only one model of the Fordson tractor. Henry Ford knows the wisdom of concentrating every energy on one model; his genius has been centered on building just one compact, easily operated tractor—a tractor useful on small farms or large farms, field work or belt work—and that will cost the least to maintain and operate.

Henry Ford & Son have specialized—they have made one tractor and made it well. That means lower manufacturing costs and a lower selling price for tractor parts, and a most serviceable, reliable tractor.

It means that the Fordson dealer is able to carry a goodly stock of tractor parts, and that he can give prompt, efficient service to the Fordson farmer. The Fordson, like the Ford car, is a utility for use during the entire year.

The demand for Fordsons is far greater than present production. Place your order now—if you delay, you may not be able to get your tractor when you want it. Order now—it is your protection.
