"THE WILLOW TREE" BASED UPON QUIANT NIPPONESE LEGEND

Cherry blossoms under a red moon of Nippon is the setting for the beautiful oriental fantasy, "The Willow Tree," starring dainty and adorable Viola Dana, which comes to the Globe Friday night. In this play Miss Dana has the most colorful and picturesque role of her career, that of the appealing little Japanese maiden who came to life from a wooden image. Ned Hamilton left England for Japan, after being jilted by his fiancée for a richer man. How he bought a wooden image from an old wood-carver, and how it came to life in the form of a beautiful Japanese girl whom Hamilton came to love, only to lose her at last, is but a part of this delightful fantasy of old Japan. It is a beautiful love story beautifully produced from the famous stage success by J. H. Benrimo and Harrison Rhodes.

What New York Critics said of "The Willow Tree":
Times—"A play of much beauty." * * * "Full of rare charm and spirit."
Herald—"A stage gem" * * * "beautiful production" * * * "spectators gasped."
Evening Post—"Exceedingly beautiful" * * * "excellent evening's entertainment" * * * "delighted the audience."
American—"Appealing romance" * * * "A charm of poetic fancy."

It ran for a season on Broadway and was the dramatic sensation of the year.

It is a gorgeous picture of sensuous appeal, wherein ancient legend and modern fact meet in a warring clash of interests. It is the heart of pagan Japan exotic and colorful, and permeated with the sweetest and most romantic of love stories.

GEORGE FAWCETT HAS STRONG ROLE

Veteran Actor a German-American in "The Hun Within"

There are few better-known actors in this country than George Fawcett, a veteran player whose latest role is that of a patriotic German-American, who disproves the statement so often made, that all hyphenated citizens of German birth are undesirable and should be expelled from the country. Mr. Fawcett plays the role of a German in "The Hun Within," which will be seen at the Globe theatre Saturday, but in this instance, the German loves the United States, the country of his adoption and is ready to sacrifice his life if necessary for the American cause. Mr. Fawcett's portrayal is said to be one of the best of its kind in motion pictures. Chief in the supporting cast is Dorothy Gish, the charming Griffith star, Charles Gerard, Douglas MacLean, Lillian Clarke and Kate Bruce.
