CAMPUS WAS SCENE OF THEATRICAL PRODUCTION

"Elopement of Ellen" Whole-some Play As Presented by Collegians.

The Albany College senior class play delighted a large open air audience last evening on the college campus and authorities pronounced it one of the theatrical treats of the season. It was perhaps one of the first entertainments of its kind given here out of doors and for this reason the affair was exceedingly unique and original and attracted throngs of spectators. "The Elopement of Ellen" as presented by the Albany College students, was a clean and wholesome comic play and the participants deserve credit by the way in which they portrayed their parts. To Miss Hutchinson much credit is due for the success of the production for it was under her coaching that the venture was undertaken. Miss Hutchinson was ably assisted by Miss Orob Harkness. Those who participated in the cast under their respective titles are as follows:

Richard Ford, a devoted husband, Irvin Custer; Molly, his wife, Dana Cushman; Robert Shepart, Molly's brother, Frank Hatfield; Max Ten Eyck, a chum of Robert's, Stanley Van Winkle; Dorothy March, engaged to Max, a guest of Mrs. Ford's, Helen Hulbert; June Haverhill, Wellesley '14 who is doing some investigation in economic courses during the summer, Ruth Knowles; John Hume, rector of St. Agnes, Louis Jones.

MANDATE FROM SUPREME COURT FAVORS LEBANON

Respondent in Suit May Run Alley Through Block Owned by Mrs. Cruson.

In a mandate issued by the state supreme court, the decision of the Linn county circuit court is sustained in the injunction suit of Hattie A. Cruson against the city of Lebanon, when the case was tried in January, 1912 during the October 1911 term of court, when a decree was entered in favor of the respondent, by granting them the right to run an alley through a block in the city of Lebanon owned by the appellant.

The case arose out of the desire of the city to run an alley through the block, which was according to a survey of the city, when needed improvements were being made. According to the supreme court mandate it is found that the equities of the case are with the respondent and recommends that the suit be dismissed. The case came up before the higher court on an appeal from the lower court.

LARGE AUDIENCE HEARD SPLENDID ENTERTAINMENT

Before one of the largest audiences yet assembled in the First Presbyterian church, 75 leading vocalists of this city presented the grandest musical treat of the year in the annual commencement oratorio concert under the title of the "Golden Legend" by Henry W. Longfellow and music by Dudley Buck. It has been said that the oratorio is a masterpiece and this statement, if it were not true, would have been ably substantiated in considering its presentation last night.

To Mrs. Adna Smith Flo is due the unprecedented success of the entertainment, for it was under her able direction that the initial rehearsal was held the fore part of last month, resulting in the magnificent production of last night. Mrs. Flo enjoys an enviable reputation as a musical directress and to her genius oratorios of previous years have been given.

Mrs. Flo who has a clear soprano voice, sang the leading role of Elsie. She was assisted by Mr. Joseph Muller, of Portland, who sang the tenor role of Prince Henry of Hohenpeck. Mr. J. C. Irvine, baritone, took the part of Lucifer and Mrs. W. H. Rhodes ably sustained the role of Bertha. Miss Wilma Waggener and Miss Alice Clement assisted on the piano.

Prior to the commencement of the cantata a short program was given consisting of a piano and song solos and two quartette selections. Miss Clement was heard in the piano solo, playing "Soiree de Vienne" from Schubert-Liszt. Mr. Muller favored the audience with three song solos, the titles of which were "Wind in the Trees," "A Moonlight Song" and "Come to the Garden of Love." Mrs. Flo, Mrs. C. E. Sox, Mrs. P. A. Young and Miss Waggener, as a quartette, sang two selections entitled "Sweet and Low" and "The Clock." ## TEST THIS REMEDY FOR COLDS

Could we afford to recommend anything that we did not have faith in? More than that, could we afford to guarantee anything to give satisfaction in every case, or money back, if we did not firmly believe that it would give satisfaction?

Our reputation would suffer and people would lose confidence in us, unless our advice was found in practically every instance, to be well grounded and worth following.

We are taking no chances with our reputation when we recommend Rexall Gold Tablets, because we have yet to hear of their failure to give satisfaction in a single instance in which we have recommended them. We have faith in them.

If it has been our observation and other's experience that Rexall Gold Tablets are the best means for helping to check and relieve colds and the discomforts that attend them, is it not pretty certain that your experience will be just as pleasant? Need you hesitate to use them—particularly when we offer Rexall Gold Tablets to you with the positive guarantee that they will help and satisfy you or your money back. Price, 25 cents.
