INTOLERANCE

Intolerance is one of the worst and most general faults of mankind.

Notwithstanding the wonderful strides made during the past few centuries in morals, art, literature and science, the people of the twentieth century are just as intolerant of the views of others as they were during the days of King Solomon. This is particularly true of religious and moral questions.

Show us the man who is big enough and broad enough to give the man who differs with him on questions of morality, credit for both intelligence and honesty and we will show you an exception to the rule. It is human nature to feel strongly on religious questions and we presume that it is one of the frailties of human nature to condemn those who are unable to view these questions from the same light as ourselves.

The Christian religion itself affords the best example of differences of opinion on questions of dogma. The multiplicity of religious denominations, all of them with conflicting creeds, demonstrates that difference of opinion is by no means confined to those who remain on the outside of the various houses of worship.

Viewed from the standpoint of the historian and the student of Bible literature, the tolerance of Christ was one of his greatest virtues. While urging the people of his time to cast aside iniquity and embrace the Christian religion, he at the same time viewed with compassion, those who were unable to agree with his teachings. He came not among men to condemn them for the views which they then held upon moral questions but to reveal a new and more glorious truth. His was the gospel of charity and it was charity of both deeds and words.

If more of us emulated the example of the Savior, fewer friendships would be broken upon the rocks of intolerance.

SIGNED COMMUNICATIONS

The Democrat again reminds its subscribers that no communication will be accepted for publication unless the same bears the signature of the author.

The public has the right to know the name of the man or woman who submits an article for publication and the Democrat has therefore adopted the iron clad rule that no communication of any nature will be accepted unless the writer is willing to attach his name to the manuscript.

HOBO DECLARES HE DIVED FROM BRIDGE

Says He is Man Who Made Jump Here 10 Years Ago for Sum of $5.

WEARY ONE RETURNS AFTER LONG ABSENCE

Spent Night in City Jail—Five It Is Said, Have Leaped From Bridge.

That he was the man who took a dare and jumped off the steel bridge crossing the Willamette river here 10 years ago for the sum of five dollars, was the declaration of a hobo given lodging in the city jail last night by the police. He gave the name of Miller. He was released this morning to find work.

Miller says he has travelled hundreds of miles since then. That he has travelled from the Atlantic coast to the Pacific Coast since Thanksgiving, was indicated by a declaration that he spent that day in Norfolk, Va.

Made Jump 10 Years Ago.

About 10 years ago, according to the memory of several people, a man employed as a woodchopper across the river was crossing the bridge on his way to town after quitting work. A crowd of men were loitering on the bridge at the time. As the man approached he overheard one of the men say: "I'd give five dollars to see anybody jump over."

"I'm your man," remarked the woodchopper.

"You're on," replied the party of the crowd who had spoken.

"Produce the money," demanded the newcomer.

Whereupon a five dollar gold piece was produced. The man took it and placing it in his mouth, mounted the railing and in a flash dived 60 feet into the river. Coming to the surface, he easily swam ashore. So sudden and unceremonious was the performance that it was over with before the awed spectators had time to fully realize what had happened.

Declares He is the Man.

Miller, the hobo, who landed in Albany yesterday on the blind and spent the night sheltered in the city jail, for lack of funds to occupy a room, declares that he was the man.

With the thrilling dive yesterday of Hazel Hewitt, who attempted to commit suicide, 5 different people have jumped off the bridge since its erection. All but the one, it is said, were attempts at suicide.

Miss Winnie Braden, of Dallas, visited relatives here yesterday.

R. H. Mont, of McMinnville, transacted business here yesterday morning.

Miner Swick, of Corvallis, was a business visitor in the city yesterday afternoon.

BUSINESS INCREASES 34 PER CENT WITHIN YEAR

Meeting this morning the stockholders of the Albany Creamery Association, in annual session, elected officers and received the report of the secretary for the year which showed that there was an increase of 34 per cent in the business for 1913 over that of 1912, the largest record ever made by the association.

The old board of directors ordered that 36 cents be paid for butter fat for the month of December, which is an increase over that paid for November of 35 1-2 cents.

After the board meeting the stockholders met. The secretary made his annual report, showing that the total business for the year was $1,590,635.99. The number of pounds of butter sold during the year was 480,960; the number of pounds of cream received during the year was 1,332,791. For the year the average price paid for butter fat was 36 1-2 cents
