MAKES MUCH MONEY.

Transportation Company Pays 6 Per Cent. Dividend.

The Sumpter Transportation company has under construction on the corner of Center and Sumpter streets a large horse hotel, which, when completed, will have a capacity for housing one hundred head of stock. The structure will be 55x100 feet, and two stories high, with corrugated iron roof.

A large force of men is pushing the work as rapidly as possible, as the large number of horses used by the company haven't much of a home until their new one is completed.

The harness shop which originally stood on this corner was torn down and the stock moved into one of the company's store rooms in the postoffice row.

New arrangements in connection with the office management of the Sumpter Transportation company will take effect in a few days, when James Newlands, at present the efficient cashier of the First Bank of Sumpter, will take charge of the company's financial and clerical affairs, having become a large stockholder, and at a recent meeting was elected secretary and treasurer of the company. Mr. Newlands will fill his new office with the same credit that he has in the bank, and will be welcomed to his new position by the many patrons of the stage company.

The official roster now stands as follows: W. H. Cade, president; T. G. Harrison, vice-president; James Newlands, secretary and treasurer, and the old veteran "stager," Tom McEwen, general manager, which insures a service second to none furnished by any stage line in the west. The company's business has assumed such proportions of late that the stock of the same has become particularly valuable. At a meeting of the directors of the company Monday, a dividend of six per cent was declared. The company, as at present constituted, was organized March 19 of the present year.

What Bait Did They Use?

Charles Goss and wife and George H. Dedrick, wife and son, Earl, returned from a camping trip to Bald lake last week, bringing with them the finest box of trout seen this season, not one of which was less than twelve inches long. It is well known that Bald lake has within its depths some of the largest trout of any stream or body of water in eastern Oregon, but for some reason it is next to impossible to find an alluring bait that will fool this game fish, and the above named fishermen are apparently the first to have discovered it; at any rate they had the fish to show for it.

COW AND PINE CREEK PLACERS.

Been Worked Since '62, but are Still Big Producers.

The Cow creek and Pine creek placer diggings, located about 30 miles from Sumpter, have been washed since 1862, and are still good producers. The past season is considered the best in their history. Anything like an accurate idea of the amount of gold taken out cannot be obtained. As one miner expressed it, "I never ask any questions regarding the output of a claim, as it only induces a man to prevaricate." Occasionally large nuggets are found, and the news is not long in spreading up and down the creek, acting as a stimulus to the others to renewed efforts.

The supply of water is limited to the snow waters in the spring, and a few mountain streams of very limited flow. The claims are all opened up separately, and an overflow of tailings is not permitted from one claim to a lower one, which is a shortsighted policy, and works a hardship on all. This is especially true of pine creek. On Cow creek more amicable arrangements prevail, and all work in harmony.

On Pine creek, what are now considered the best claims, were located two years ago. It has always been considered that the diggings only extended to a certain gravel flow, which crossed the gulch some three miles from the mouth, as repeated efforts to find pay dirt above that point had been made without success, and it was not until the seventh pan of dirt from bedrock had been washed that the fortune finders were rewarded by getting three large nuggets, aggregating about $18 in value. The news caused a stampede, and the upper end of the stream was located in a day, mostly by new comers. Since then work has been prosecuted from one end of the creek to the other.

Some 80 men are employed through the season, which averages about four months. The gold is all coarse, and many large nuggets are found weighing as high as $100. The largest nugget, weighing $837, was found last season by Patrick O'Brien, who is fortunate enough to own most of the water available."—M. E. Baine in Oregonian.
