THAT COMING BOOM.

Should Be Hailed With Delight by Progressive People

There seems to be a universally prevailing sentiment that another boom is coming. Newspapers in every section of the country herald its approach. Some, as if it is to be regarded as a sort of cyclone; others as if it may be dreaded as a pestilential scourge, and others again as if it will prove a boon and savior to all sections alike. So far as the Mining Review is concerned, we say, let the boom come as quickly as it may! Some people living here who think they passed through a genuine boom—imagine that all sorts of injurious results followed the little activity this locality enjoyed in 1888 and 1889. It was in no sense of the word a boom. It was but the tail end of the Kansas City, Denver and Los Angeles genuine boom. How were those cities effected by it?

They grew from absolutely insignificant places to great flourishing cities. Twenty-five years ago Salt Lake was in reality larger than any of the cities named. How do they stand now? The boom gave to Denver nearly seventy miles of paved streets, a trolley system of street car service only surpassed by St. Louis; a perfect system of drainage, two water works system, an unlimited number of first class hotels, and the most complete illuminating plant to be found anywhere.

Then too—it brought to Colorado new spirits—new energy—new ideas backed by capital, and the combination wrought the marvelous changes that only irrepresible, ambitious men can produce. The old timers had in a measure grown used to all the rare opportunities and vast resources—and they could not see the illimitable possibilities like the new comers, who had been surrounded by cramped environments and restricted conditions; but when the new blood was injected the transformation followed.

This section is positively threatened with a monstrous boom—the Review hails it with delight. House renting agencies declare they cannot supply the demand; real estate firms express much gratification in the activity and advancing prices and, best of all, every firm in Salt Lake City handling mining machinery is busy every hour in the day supplying the wants of customers all over this intermountain country. It surely appears as if a thorough, animated, enlivened boom is heading our way, and the Review entertains many of the fossilized, antiquated spirits not to put anything in its way.—Salt Lake Mining Review.

Sale of Prairie Diggings Confirmed.

In this issue of the Eagle is published the decree of the United States court in the case brought by the heirs of the Lohman estate, to have the deed set aside made by Fred Yorgensen, as administrator, to Messrs. Hines & Helmer. This settlement of the case is the result of the trip made to Portland by Attorney Hicks, and has quieted the title to one of the most prominent mining properties in this part of Grant county. By this decision the acts of Fred Youngensen, as administrator of the Lohman estate, are endorsed, and Messrs. Hines & Helmer are declared to be the lawful and rightful owners of the Prairie Diggings mine, once the property of said estate. County Judge Laylock also comes in for his share of honor, since the decision of the United States court affirms his acts connected with the estate in the capacity of probate judge. The people of Grant county will welcome the settlement of this case, as it involves property that when under a state of development will mean much toward interesting capital in the mines in this part of Grant county. All of the defendants in the case, and their attorneys, J. C. Moreland, Errett Hicks and Cattanch & Wood, are naturally jubilant over the result.—Canyon City Eagle.

Man Who Discovered Gold in California.

A Salt Lake dispatch of November 26, gives the following account of the death of the man who made the record of the first gold discovered in California in 1848: Henry W. Bigler, the man who made the first record of the great California gold discovery in 1848, died at St. George, Utah, on Saturday of pneumonia. He was about 75 years of age. His record of gold discovery reads "Monday, 24th. This day some kind of metal was found in the tail race that looks like gold." This entry was made on January 24, 1848. Six days later, on January 30, Bigler made the following entry. "Clear, and has been for the last week. Our metal has been tried and proves to be gold. It is thought to be rich. We have picked up more than a hundred dollars worth in the last week." Bigler was a member of the Mormon battalion and was working at Sutter's mill race when the discovery was made. He and three others were guests of honor at the California golden jubilee in 1898. The other three men are yet living, James S. Brown, of Salt Lake, Azariah Smith, of Manti, Utah, and William S. Johnston of Ramah, New Mexico.
