

LOST HORSE WILL SHIP.

Now in Ore That Assays as High as $79 a Ton.

E. A. Clem, of Portland, adds as a postscript to a business letter to THE MINER:

One of the directors of the Lost Horse Mining company here is in receipt of some very fine quartz which was sent down by Mr. Hudson a few days ago. This proves the best sample of ore yet sent in from the property, carrying values of $43 to $79 per ton, the character of the ore showing it to be a very fine concentrating proposition.

The management of the Lost Horse company is maturing plans to begin the shipment of such ore as will bear freight and treatment charges, and hopes to be able to meet the working and other expenses of further development from the output of the mine.

The Lost Horse company owns several other claims in the Cracker creek district, which were to receive attention during the summer months, but it was thought best to confine operations largely on the Lost Horse claim until such time as it is well developed. This claim is well equipped for economical working, has nearly 200 feet of main working tunnel, with several drifts, exposing large quantities of ore, but for the most part of low grade. It has 400 feet of steel rail track with automatic dumping steel ore cars and comfortable quarters for a crew of 12 men.

Trust Advocate on Smelter Combine.

A Washington, D. C., press dispatch dated March 11, says: Elverton R. Chapman, a New York banker and broker, who has been largely engaged in recent years in financing industrial combinations, was this afternoon a witness before the Industrial commission. Among the companies he has financed is the American Smelting & Refining company. Mr. Chapman said this company had issued $27,400,000 of preferred stock, and the same amount of common stock, the vendor companies receiving cash or preferred stock at par and 70 per cent of the company stock, the remaining 30 per cent going to pay the expenses of the negotiations incidental to the organization. The preferred stock represented the actual value of the properties secured, and the company stock the good will. The working capital of the consolidation which had been subscribed and paid in was $6,500,000. The consolidation had been effected to reduce expenses and eliminate competition. It was calculated, he said, that over $5,000,000 would be saved annually on freight charges alone. He had heard no complaint on the part of the miners concerning the combination, and was inclined to believe the smelter combination was in the interest of the miners. He said the combination includes all the smelters of the country except the Guggenheim concerns, and he admitted that if these latter concerns had been taken in, as was proposed, a monopoly would have been secured. Seven per cent dividend had been paid upon the preferred stock. The net earnings last year were about $4,000,000.
