HAWLEY'S

WHY DON'T YOU BUY SOMETHING GOOD

You all know the North Pole mine is the great mine of Oregon and one of the world's greatest gold producers.

The South Pole mine joins the North Pole at its end lines and owns jointly three claims with the North Pole, and has in all, 4986 feet on the North Pole vein. The North Pole is valued by this camp at $10,000,000. Don't the South Pole look as though it ought to be good at present prices?

There is over 2,000 feet of development now on the great North Pole vein on the South Pole ground. Tons upon tons of ore above the various tunnel levels. The great North Pole is over 1200 feet deep at the very end lines of the South Pole. Is this not a legitimate mining proposition? The one ore shoot of the North Pole mine is valued alone at $5,000,000. Do you suppose this stops at the end lines of the South Pole, because there is a different ownership of the ground? This stock will advance in price and its advance warranted by the additional ore reserves blocked out. The South Pole should make, next to the North Pole, the greatest paying mine in Oregon.
