ROY H. MILLER WRITES ABOUT GOLDFIELD CAMP

Under date of Goldfield, Nevada, February 5, 1905, Mr. Miller writes the following interesting letter to The Sumpter Miner:

You may think I have gotten lost on the desert, and died; but no, like a true desert rose, I have bloomed and am alive and green as a grasshopper.

There is a wonderful country south of here and fabulously rich ore has been found in the Bull Frog district, which is about forty miles south of here. The ore is especially rich in gold and silver, the latter being in the mercurial state, making it impossible to transport.

The only way to get into the unprofitable area, or so I should say unproductive, is to go to the mine, there have a camp center for both rich and poor.

In my opinion, Goldfield and Tonopah will be the next one of the ex-Chicago mine, running south close to the Bull Frog and from there to El Paso after traveling over a large part of it, which you will remember was my theory when I left Sumpter. I believe that the southern country is a winner, for it contains the only safe water and there is rich country there.

Colorado's millionaires are worth $260,000,000.

Colorado is the state of great individual fortunes, outranking any state in the union on a per capita basis. It has the further distinction that most of its vast fortunes are made within its boundaries, not done in mining, but in the cattle industry, in real estate speculation, in mining, sugar beet culture, potato farming, and in manufacturing and commodity pursuits in various stages of development.

Mr. Hendryx is also a director in the First National Bank of Sumpter.
