SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 11, 1905

When our neighbors and acquaintances forge ahead and become prosperous and prominent, we often hear the remark: "They have had good luck." The truth is that in nine cases out of ten "luck" is simply the result of one's best efforts to succeed in life. We believe it was Max O'Rell who wrote the following definition of "luck": "Luck means rising at six o'clock in the morning, living on a dollar a day if you earn two, minding your own business and not meddling with other people's. Luck means appointments you have never failed to keep, trains you have never failed to catch. Luck means trusting in God and your own resources." Max O'Rell never said a wiser thing, and no better definition of luck can be given. It should be printed in capitals and hung up in every office, counting room, work shop and living room in the country.

The November Sunset

One of the most attractive magazines on the news stands is the November "Sunset." The cover, "Sunset on Monterey Bay," was designed by Lucia Mathews. The leading article, "Re-deeming the West," by E. T. Perkins, is a detailed description of the work which this Government is doing to reclaim the arid West by irrigation. This is the greatest work ever undertaken by any government and will make fruitful millions of acres of hitherto barren land.

The text is beautifully illustrated by half-tones from photographs by Walter J. Lubken of the Government reclamation service. Other features of this number are: "In the Shadow of Mesquit," a fiction story by Arthur W. North; "How We climbed Mt. Rainier," by Raglan Glaseck; "California's Venice," by John B. Dame; "The Rights of Animals," an essay by Gelett Burgess; "The Author and the Publisher," by Warren Cheney; and the last chapter of a serial story by Bailey Millard.

The Pacific Monthly for November

The Editors of the Pacific Monthly in publishing the "Personal Narrative of Homer Davenport," feel that they have been the means of adding something to the literature of the world. The article is in the form of an interview, which was given by Mr. Davenport last Summer at his "Farm" on the "Trail" at the Lewis and Clark Exposition.

The "Personal Narrative of Homer Davenport," which is an interview with the famous cartoonist, illustrated by reproductions of many of his most famous cartoons, is perhaps as unusual, and at the same time as entertaining an article, as ever ap-

Impoverished Soil

Impoverished soil, like impoverished blood, needs a proper fertilizer. A chemist by analyzing the soil can tell you what fertilizer to use for different products.

If your blood is impoverished your doctor will tell you what you need to fertilize it and give it the rich, red corpuscles that are lacking in it. It may be you need a tonic, but more likely you need a concentrated fat food, and fat is the element lacking in your system.

There is no fat food that is so easily digested and assimilated as peared in a magazine. The whole charm of Mr. Davenport's personality is preserved.

Two subjects of timely interest, a descriptive article on the Columbia Jetty, by Kathryn Wilson, and the story of the wheat of the Inland Empire, by Arno Dosch, are supplementary to the fourth paper of the "Coning Supremacy of the Pacific," by Dr. Wolf von Schierbrand, "The Development of the Pacific Coast." The Pacific Monthly maintains its policy of giving truthful, yet picturesque accounts of the industrial development in the Pacific Coast country.
