A REAL MISER.

With Him the Ruling Passion Was Indeed Strong in Death.

The talk turned on misers, and a titled Italian in the party said:

"Let me tell you about Arpagno, the famous Roman miser, and you will know what a real miser is."

"As Arpagno lay dying in his cold, dark, bare palace of stone on the Corso his one thought was that, since he was too ill to eat, a full lira a day was being saved on the food bill."

"The doctor was announced. The doctor, after feeling Arpagno's pulse, looked grave."

"Well," said the miser, "how much longer have I to live?"

"Only half an hour," was the reply.

"Arpagno's eyes flashed fire."

"You scoundrel!" he cried. "Why do you let things run on to the last minute like this? Do you want to ruin me? Send for the barber at once."

"The barber arrived posthaste."

"You charge," said Arpagno, "20 centesimi for shaving?"

"Yes, signor."

"And for shaving a corpse 5 lire?"

"Yes."

"Arpagno glanced at the clock. Seven of the thirty minutes left him still remained."

"Then shave me quickly," he gasped.

"As the operation finished Arpagno died. But with his last breath, smiling happily, he murmured while the barber dried his cold, pale cheeks:

"How splendid—4 lire and 80 centesimi saved!"

A woman suffrage lecturer, according to the Boston Globe, recently brought down the house with the following argument: "I have no vote, but my groom has. I have a great respect for that man in the stables, but I am sure if I were to go to him and say, 'John, will you exercise the franchise?' he would reply, 'Please, mum, which horse be that?'"

A Variation in Sport.

"What happened when you passed a law against gambling in your state?"

"The bookmakers got right to work making bets on whether it would be enforced or not."—Washington Star.

Her Game Blocked.

The timid looking little woman on the Euclid car noticed that her purse was not in her bag where she had placed it. Instead, it was hanging from her arm on a chain—hanging in full view where it would tempt the nimble fingers of the pickpockets assigned to that beat. With great forethought she picked up the purse and started to put it in the bag. But the purse didn't go in, because it was attached to the arm of the persimmony faced woman standing next to her. Of course the woman with the bag stopped right there and dropped the stranger's purse.

"You'd better let that alone," spoke up the persimmony faced woman. "I've been watching you ever since you got on, and you needn't think I didn't see what you were trying to do."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.
