COLOR TESTS

Navy Department Will Try a Green on the Yankee.

nvisibility is the Object Sought by Officials-White Painted Vessels Can Be Seen and Their Identity and Power Established as Far as Glass Can Reach.

Boston, Mass., Sept. 5 - The famous white squadron" of the American lavy may become a "green squadron" as a result of a series of tests that were commenced this week with the big auxiliary cruiser Yankee off the Massachusetts coast. Early in the week the Yankee left the Charlestown navy-yard, where every portion of her exterior had been painted a deep slate green. The cruiser was then sent to sea for a series of tests to determine at what distance she would be dis-cernible in the new color, and how it would act in various sorts of weather. Later the Yankee will be painted other shades of green, and the same esperiments will be made. The re-sults of the tests will not be an-aounced until the experiments have here combeted though it is pretty abunced until the experiments have been completed, though it is pretty well understood that some one of the shades will be selected. The navy department recently decided that the white painted warships were too easily seen at a distance, and their identity and power were clearly dis-load as for as the sec or drawn identity and power were clearly dis-closed as far as the eye or glasses could reach. Acting on the advice and recommendations of the general war hoard, of which Admiral Dewey is chairman, it was decided to have a series of practical experiments to absolutely prove the advantage of a more somber color and to test, by invartical methods the various shodes more sommer color and to test, by practical methods, the various shades of green paint as a method of hiding a ship's approach. The carrying of the painting scheme to the masts, ventilators and every exposed portion of the ship's exterior above the water line is a new idea.
