NOTES OF SCIENCE

A Missourian is the inventor of a seed planting attachment that can be added to any farm cultivator.

South Africa has more than 32,000,000 sheep, producing annually more than 170,000,000 pounds of wool.

The bowl of a new medicine spoon has a hinged cover to retain its contents, easily lifted when desired.

To enable a man in one room to watch a cash register in another a device termed a detector has been invented.

Scheme to Fool the Taste When Swallowing Medicine

Yet another attempt has been made of devising some scheme whereby a patient may take a disagreeable medicine without tasting it. In the new idea a tiny cup is provided which is dipped inside an ordinary tumbler. The medicine is placed in the inner cup, and the tumbler filled with water. The inventor's idea is that the patient simply drinks the water, whereupon the medicine also flows out, and floating upon a film of water, is swallowed down, without coming into contact with the tongue.

Many Are Color Blind.

One man in every 60 in England is partially or wholly color blind, so at least the tests for the English mercantile marine seem to show. A noted professor maintains that the proportion is even larger.

Mrs. J. W. Sadler and little daughter Peggy, Mrs. G. R. Watt and her sister Miss Wanda Key are spending their vacation at the beach. Mr. Sadler and Mr. Watt will join them Saturday.

Mrs. Diana Snyder and family and Mrs. Kenneth Grimm and son spent several days at Butteville last week, "camping" at the Vandeleur home, and enjoying the bathing in the Willamette.

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

THE PUMA PAIR.

"I'm the puma, or Mr. Mountain Lion," said the puma.

"And I'm Mrs. Mountain Lion or your puma mate," said his mate.

"Now, we both know who we are and we both know who each other is," said Mr. Mountain Lion.

"We know so many things," said Mrs. Mountain Lion.

"That's so," agreed her mate.

"I am not just sure what all we do know," said Mrs. Mountain Lion.

"Neither am I," said her mate, "but I don't suppose it makes much difference."

"It might, of course, if anyone came up to us and said,

"What do you know?"

"Do you suppose," said Mr. Mountain Lion, "that anyone would be so rude as to come up to two perfectly nice creatures and ask such a question?"

"They might," said Mrs. Mountain Lion, or Mrs. Puma, known by either name.

"Horrors," said Mr. Mountain Lion.

"Horrors indeed, but it might be true," said Mrs. Mountain Lion.

"I don't think it would be fair," said Mr. Mountain Lion. "It would not be nice to go up to anyone and say,

"How much do you know, or, 'what do you know?' It would be very rude, and also unkind. No one wants to show how little he knows, but everyone wants to show how much he knows and when asked how much it might appear very little."

"You talk as though you didn't know much," said Mrs. Mountain Lion.

"But I know a good deal," said Mr. Mountain Lion.

"My dear puma mate," said Mrs. Mountain Lion, "what would you do if anyone did ask you how much you knew?"

"I would pretend I was asleep," said Mr. Mountain Lion.

"That's a bright idea," said Mrs. Mountain Lion, "but suppose your ribs were tickled and you laughed, what then?"

"I'd pretend I was laughing and talking in my sleep," said Mr. Mountain Lion.

"You are bright, there is no mistake about it," said his mate. "Let's talk about what we do know, eh?"

"Yes," said Mr. Mountain Lion, "we can commence by saying we know who each other is."

"Of course we know it before we said it," smiled Mrs. Mountain Lion.

"Well, it does no harm that I sometimes repeat what we know," said Mr. Mountain Lion.

"Ah yes," said Mrs. Mountain Lion, "it is quite harmless to do so, and, too, it is nice. It is pleasant to talk over our ways and habits and it is just like big people talk over their business plans and children over their school or their games."

"We're the Puma family, the nice family of handsome mountain lions."

"We are," agreed Mr. Mountain Lion, "and we are quick and spry and clever. We can run and move easily and we can climb wonderfully."

"Oh, we're such good climbers! We're the best climbers in the world—that is we're the best climbers of the great cat family—especially of the big members of the family."

"Yes, that's right," said Mrs. Mountain Lion, "and not only can we climb but we can swim. Oh, how we can swim. We aren't going to be senseless creatures when we come to a piece of water—we're going to swim."

"That's right," said Mr. Mountain Lion, "but water doesn't come in pieces, my love, it comes in ponds and lakes and streams and brooks and rivers and oceans."

"Well," said Mrs. Mountain Lion, "I meant, of course that when we came to any pond or brook or lake or river we would be able to swim in the water therein!"

"Ah, that's the way to say it," said Mr. Mountain Lion, "and that word 'therein' made a particularly fine ending, yes, a particularly fine one."

Proved It.

Teacher—There is not anything that has three feet. Everything has either two or four feet.

Tommy—I know of two things that's got three.

Teacher—What are they, Tommy?

Tommy—A yard and a three-legged stool.

Matching the Word.

"Just as we reached a place on the road yesterday where hung out a sign 'Sea Food a Specialty'—"

"Well, what happened?"

"Our auto turned turtle."
