W. H. Asquith and O. L. Carpenter returned last week from Comstock, near Cottage Grove, where they were doing some paper hanging and other interior work for J. D. Harvey, who has just built a new house there. The Harveys were formerly in the sawmill business here. They moved to Walton, Oregon, and then to Comstock where they have purchased several hundred acres of timber land and have established an up-to-date mill. They are now employing 40 to 50 men.

Every motorist passing over the Aurora-Barlow cut off has a store of "strong words" to describe the ordeal. The old road over the hill is now in far better condition than the "cut-off," though the latter is by no means impassible. A thousand additional yards of gravel has just been placed upon the low stretch from the Bergerson place to Barlow, and it should be in fair shape soon. But motorists should take it slow, and not attempt to pass other cars.
