

Some More Local News Happenings

Silverton is planning for a rip-roaring, high-screaming, humming, sizzling Fourth of July celebration.

Order your envelopes, letterheads, statements, cards, shipping tags, etc. Now. If we can't save you money we don't want the job. Try the Aurora Observer, the mail order job office of the west.

Mr. Bishop, the Salem woolen mills store, asks you to call at his store and examine the virgin wool suits he offers at such reduced prices. Tomorrow is bargain day there.

Miss Frances Robinson returned home Sunday, June 19, from Palo Alto, California, where she has been attending Stanford University. Mr. Robinson's alma mater.

Dr. Frank Angell, professor of psychology, Stanford University, is a guest of "Robinwood"—the E. G. Robinson home.

E. A. Green, formerly a teacher in Aurora schools, has accepted a position near Vancouver, Washington, as principal of a grammar school. Mr. Green was in Eastern Oregon the past term. He will spend most of the summer with his mother at "Robinwood."

AURORA THE HUB

Come to Aurora Saturday. Extra free attractions will be furnished every Saturday in Aurora and our merchants will offer better real bargains than Portland or Salem. Aurora is the center and most convenient town to reach between the two big cities.

LAW

According to law you must NOT write your name on butter wrappers. Be cautious, go according to law; play safe. Law says butter wraps must be certain kind of paper, printed with regular butter wrapper ink, such as the Observer uses. We print them complete and furnish proper paper at $1.50 per 100.

NAUGHTY WOODBURN MEN

The Independent asks: "Who were the Woodburn men who had the carnival girls out, and the machine was wrecked?" The question properly could be answered, but then wives wouldn't believe it.

NEW RESORT

H. L. O'Neil, of Woodburn, has purchased a five-acre tract just north of the Bently ranch on the highway, and is rushing the work of building a modern service station there. A fully equipped camping ground will be built, also a large dancing pavilion. All will be brilliantly lighted and otherwise beautiful.

SERVICE

The Molalla Electric Company has contracted to run lines back on their transmission poles to the W. L. Bently ranch half way between Hubbard and Woodburn. Several progressive ranchers along here will take service and thus add value and comfort to their homes.

LEGAL BLANKS

Mortgages, Contract for Sale, Indemnity Bond, Bill of Sale, Special Power of Attorney, Partial Release of Mortgage, Warranty Deeds, General Leases, Quit Claim Deeds, Satisfaction of Mortgage, Promissory Notes, etc. 21 for $1.00; 50 for $1.75; 100 for $3.00 at the Aurora Observer.

THIS WEEK'S ISSUE

The Fourth comes but once a year. This year few towns in Marion or Clackamas counties are celebrating the Fourth, the city of Woodburn being an exception. Woodburn people realizing the worth of advertising in the Observer have taken considerable space for this week, their way of advertising their celebration and calling your attention to their various establishments. There will be 10,000 visitors in Woodburn on the Fourth, and each firm is asking this paper to call attention to their respective stores.

BERRY PICKING ON

Marion county has begun picking her loganberries—5000 tons of them. The market is shot to pieces and 3½ cents a pound is the highest that the growers will receive for the berries. Cherry picking is well advanced, and like the logans the price is down, 3 and 4 cents being received for cherries. It behooves families to put up lots of fruit this year while both the fruit and sugar is at bottom price.

The Union Pacific System has issued several books and one we received this week from G. P. A. Wm. McMurray entitled "The Pacific Northwest and Alaska" is beautiful in the superlative degree. The authentic descriptions and information should be in the hands of every citizen east of the Cascades. The colored engravings are perfect and for the territory it carries, it is the most accurate and best advertising we have seen lately.

TO RESTORE MORRIS VAULT

Memorial Tablet Also Will Be Placed on Resting Place of Supporter of Washington.

After more than half a century the burial vault of Gouverneur Morris, in the yard of St. Ann's church, New York city, is to be restored and a memorial tablet placed.

Gouverneur Morris, who was born January 30, 1752, is credited with writing the final draft of the Constitution of the United States. Morris was elected to the Continental congress when twenty-five years old, and soon became one of Washington's ablest supporters. He took an active part in the preparation of the Constitution, and though, according to Theodore Roosevelt, many of his theories were rejected, he remained one of its warmest advocates. He was also active in the framing of the Constitution of the state of New York. During the French revolution Gouverneur Morris was minister plenipotentiary to France, and was a large power in forming the early ties between this country and France. History also credits him with being the projector of the Erie canal. Morrisania, the old manor of the Morris family, originally consisted of 1,920 acres in what is now the Bronx, New York city. On the estate all the members of the Morris family, many of them famous in Colonial and Revolutionary history, were buried. In 1866, after the completion of St. Ann's church, they were removed to the vault they now occupy.

WHY SOME TOWNS STAND STILL

The citizens of a town make or ruin its property. A town is not like Old Uncle Tom's Topsy. It won't "just grow." It has to be cared for like a hot house plant. Its people must talk its advantages, push its good points, and set forth its location and adaptiveness for whatever purpose it is best suited.

Weeds spring up unseen and flourish unattended, but a field of corn must be cultivated. So it is with villages, towns and cities. Some one must work to pull the community out of the slough of lifelessness.

The live town is alive because its citizens are alive. The more pep they put into their jobs, the better for the place. Three or four good workers can raise a town from the dead. In the last fifteen years crossroads settlements have become flourishing villages, moribund villages have grown into the city class. Regardless of natural advantages somebody hustled to bring about the growth in each instance.

And did these hustlers have the cheerful assistance of their neighbor's. Nay, nay, Brother. The neighbors stood around and kidded and knocked. There was never a leader from the time of Noah down to the present who did not have to hear the scoffs and sneers and taunts of the ingrates he was trying to help. The town hustlers who are up and doing get no encouragement from the members of the hot stove cabinet. That is why some towns stand still.—Canby News.

JOB PRINTING

We print anything cheaper than Portland, as good as any place. Send your next job printing order to the Observer and be convinced.

Many Farmer Patriots

The farmers among the Declaration signers were Carter Braxton of Virginia, William Floyd of New York, Benjamin Harrison of Virginia, John Hart of New Jersey, Stephen Hopkins of Rhode Island, Francis Lightfoot Lee of West Virginia and Lewis Morris of New York. Carter Braxton of Virginia recorded his occupation as that of a "planter," but Benjamin Harrison, also of Virginia, and a planter and grower of importance in the James river country, described himself as a farmer.
