

WOODBURN

CELEBRATES

THE FLAG
by

Amelia Josephine Burr

Before, it was our heritage, the red and white and blue;
Our grandsires died to raise it and our sires to keep it true.
We prayed we might be worthy of their memory as we cast in shimmering beauty to the wind the banner of our past.
But now—O God, our hearts are with our living and our dead!
Bone of our bone the white has grown, flesh of our flesh the red.
Our substance and our souls are pledged to keep it undented.
Before, it was our heritage—today it is our child.
