or law makers listen to the arguments for state insurance monopolies is that they understand the business of insurance less than they do the busines of banking or selling groceries.

It is a legitimate function of the state to provide laws for the protection of its people and see that these laws are enforced. It is not a legitimate function, however, under our system of government, for the state to set up monopolistic state enterprises to the exclusion of private initiative and endeavor.

The fight for monopolistic state casuality and workingmen's compensation insurance is an entering wedge for other lines of state endeavor along socialistic lines -Exchange.

Romantic Story of Old London Jacobite Bank

One of the most romantic stories in banking history is recalled by the announcement that the business of Messrs, Drummond of Charing Cross, the old-established private bankers, has many associations with the Jacobites. Indeed, its founder, Andrew Drummond, is believed to have been a Jacobite first and a banker afterward.

It is at least certain that he walked from Edinburgh to London, with a price on his head, bearing funds to be used to secure the restoration of the Stuarts. The Malacca cane with a gold crutch handle which he carried with him on this adventurous journey still hangs, a treasured possession, in the bank parlor.

The old banker probably thought of this journey and of the risks he had run in taking it, when Simon Fraser, Lord Lovat, the "old fox" of the highlands, passed the bank on his way to the tower after the "forty-five." Lovat, whose gray hairs did not save him from the scaffold, had been on the

As he passed the bank windows Robert and Henry Drummond looked out to see him, but Andrew sat still at his desk. "I suppose you would run out to watch me if I was to be beheaded," he remarked, dryly.

The realization must have distressed exceedingly one who lived in Anthracnose canker and fruit rot | fear of embonpoint even to the extreme of drinking vinegar and generally mortifying the flesh. In 1811 in shoes only-he had got his weight and a half pounds. Tom Moore seems similarly to have decreased, for in 1807 he was one hundred and fortysix pounds and in 1809 one hundred and twenty-five. Another famous man, one who also could have had no wish to lose his figure and who will go down in history as much for his insolent question as to the identity of the prince regent-"Who's your fat friend?"-as for his fastidiousness in ties, was Beau Brummell. In 1798 Brummell stood at one hundred and seventy-two pounds in boots, in 1811 at one hundred and and in 1815 at one hundred and seventy-eight pounds in shoes. In 1816 the Beau had to fly from his creditors to Calais. None the less there is still one more entry, in 1822, suggesting that he was able to visit the scenes of his old triumphs again; and then he was one hundred and fiftythree pounds in boots.

As for the "fat friend," later George IV, he evidently earned the epithet. In 1791 he weighed two hundred and forty-two pounds in boots, in 1798 two hundred and twenty-four pounds "after gout," in 1800 two hundred and forty-seven pounds in hat and boots, and later that year two hundred and twenty-nine pounds "after gout." In 1803 "with gout" he weighed two hundred and eighteen pounds. The figures help us to picture those solid men of a century ago. We can see them trotting or mincing or promenading with an air, small and large, down the sunny side of St. James street to weigh themselves before dinner.-Youth's Companion.

FACTS OF INTEREST

Publication by Government Gives Much Information.

"Know America First" should be a maxim of wide appeal to Americans contributions to the general knowledge of some features of our national domain and history. This publication is entitled "Boundaries, Areas, Geographic Centers and Altitudes of the United States and of the Several States, with a Brief Record of Important Changes in Their Territory," by E. M. Douglas, and has been issued by the Department of the Interior as Bulletin 689 of the geological survey. The report is sold by the superintendent of documents, Washington, at a nominal cost.

The book gives numerous littleknown facts relating to the organization of the original thirteen colonies and of the states after the Revolution. Bermuda islands and also the country westward to the Pacific ocean, then called the South sea-so christened by Balboa in 1513, because at the place where he first saw it the shore line runs nearly east and west-or that the area now called Vermont once belonged to New York and that Massachusetts controlled the area now included in Maine.

The reasons for the peculiar irreglarities and jogs in some of the boundary lines are explained. For example, the "nose" projecting into Canada at the Lake of the Woods, on the Minnesota boundary, is due to the use of inaccurate maps by the makers of the treaties by which this area became United States territory. The "panhandle" at the southern corner of Missouri is said to be the result of efforts of a prominent property owner to have his plantation included in the new state.

The indefiniteness of some of the early boundary lines is illustrated by quotation from Rufus Choate, who in the boundary dispute between Massachusetts and Rhode Island said before the Massachusetts legislature: The commissioners might as well have decided that the line between the states was bounded on the north by a bramble bush, on the south by a lue jay, on the west by a hive of bees in swarming time, and on the east by 500 foxes with firebrands tled to their tails.'

The state of California has within its boundaries the highest and the lowest points of dry land in the United States proper, and Alaska has the lighest mountain peak in the possessions of the United States. Colorado is the state having the greatest average altitude; Delaware has the least.

The bulletin describes the outlying possessions of the United States and tells when and how they were acquired. Of the newly added possessions (Alaska, bought in 1867, not included), the 7,000 or more islands comprising the Philippine group, cover the greatest area. ### A Test Every Man Past 40 Should Make Medical authorities agree that 65 per cent of all men past middle age (many much younger) are afflicted with a disorder of the prostate gland. Achesin feet, legs and back, frequent nightly risings, sciatic pains, are some of the signs—and now a member of the American Association for the Advancement of Science has written a remarkably inter-esting Free Book that tells of other symtoms and just what they mean. No longer should a man approaching or past the prime of life be content to regard these pains and conditions as nevitable signs of approaching age. Already more than 10,000 men have used the amazing method described in this book to restore their youthful health and vigor, and to restore the prostate gland to its prope rfunctioning.
