WELCOME THE NEWCOMERS

We are not able to say exactly how many new families come into our town every year or every month. But whatever influx of population there is, whether large or small, should claim the attention of all citizens. New blood is healthful. The growth of any community is stronger because of it.

Let us at all times extend the hand of fellowship to our citizens by adoption. Freedom to travel to a new place, and to take up one's residence there and become a part of the community is a rich heritage made possible by the fortune of orderly government. But it is what happens to a man after he has arrived at his newly found home that is a help or a detriment to him and to the community he enters.

Those of you who were not actually born in this vicinity will call to mind how you felt when you first landed here. Wasn't it "a grand and glorious feelin'" to be given a hearty welcome, if indeed we were? It is well to remember that the new arrivals have their "ears to the ground" wanting to learn our ways and customs, and in nearly all cases wanting to become boosters for the town, and to do their share in its future expansion. When the newcomer knows that each one does his or her best for, and says his or her best for our town a good example is set for the support of home business. Then the new citizen falls in line, and the first thing we know everybody is benefited.

THE SACRIFICE OF BEAUTY

Charles H. Cheney, well known city planner, recently said: "Why is it that only about 10 per cent of the buildings of New York City or of Philadelphia, Chicago, San Francisco or Los Angeles are sufficiently good or attractive to be worthy of permanent life?"

"In fifty years or more half of the buildings in most of our cities will be torn down; not because they are unsafe in framing, but because their exterior appearance ruins the value of the street."

"These are pressing social and economic problems of far-reaching importance, not only to real estate business, but to the whole human structure of the city. A new consciousness is abroad today, demanding a constructive answer and a definite solution. At many scattered points across the country definite steps are being taken."

It is assumed that Mr. Cheney had reference to business buildings, for, in the case of buildings of the monumental and institutional type America comes well up in the scale in reference to architectural designs of the past few years. But the great indictment comes to our cities as a whole when Mr. Cheney gives the percentages of good architecture and good environment which our buildings offer in comparison with those of Europe. We quote: Washington, 25 per cent; New York City, 12 per cent; Philadelphia, 15 per cent; Boston, 12 per cent; Chicago, 8 per cent; San Francisco, 11 per cent; Los Angeles, 12 per cent; Paris, 50 per cent; Amsterdam, Holland, 85 per cent.

The above figures are significant of this fact; that the people of the United States have sacrificed beauty for economics or at least for haste and space. But the economy is false. If beauty of design has no place in life, then why build beautiful churches and schools? Architecture does have social and spiritual values in the everyday life of the people. It is time that American cities and towns awakened to the proposition that the artistic values of building construction bring dividends in money values as well.

Planning laws, with the right kind of teeth in them, and city officials and planning commissioners with the right kind of backbone in them, will work wonders for beauty and excellence in future development, and will bring dollars to the pocket of every property owner.

What has this to do with our town? It means that we have every chance in the world over these larger cities to start right before it becomes too expensive to change. Good architecture does not necessarily mean a lot of "flub-dubs," but it means a degree of both uniformity and diversity in buildings, depending on their class, and a general balance and harmony that is noticed favorably throughout the whole community.

TWO FRANCS AND A MILLION TEARS

Two francs, saved by a schoolboy at Rheims, France, and donated to the Mississippi river flood relief fund, was turned over to Ambassador Myron T. Herrick who, according to the dispatch, could not keep the tears from his eyes.

Ambassador Herrick merely gave visible expression to the millions of thankful hearts throughout the United States. In one sense all of the hundreds and thousands of dollars collected from the well-to-do in "drives" do not mean as much as the sacrifices made by this lad of France. The fact that he gave only two francs which he had saved up sou by sou or cent by cent is evidence that his was a real sacrifice.

That little French boy will amount to something. Yea, he does amount to something now! It is the widow's mite—in this case the schoolboy's mite—that forms the subject of sermons and poems. It is the small donation, given because it hurts and because the hurting becomes an expression of true love and sympathy, that means so much in this thing we call humanity.

Those two francs exchanged for the coin of the realm will buy a loaf of bread or two. But man does not "live by bread alone." That boy has invested his pittance in the food of the spirit—the kind of spirit that reaches out across the sea and says that war shall be no more; the spirit that knows no international boundary lines when the call comes; the spirit that declares the brotherhood of man in distress, and the fellowship of man in peace.

Great Britain said "Gee, nevah" at Geneva.

Henry Ford appears to be the world's only publisher who doesn't read his own publication.

If America ever needed Lindbergh she needs him now to fly over to Geneva and pacify those peace-time belligerents.

Ford's pro-Jewish statement was inevitable. When any Gentile can accumulate more wealth than any of the Jews in the world he isn't much of a sport to keep on holding a grudge against them.

BEAVERTON
