MARKET REPORTS

Grain
There were no marked trends in the markets last week. A good export demand for wheat offset the weakening effect of very heavy Canadian movement. Soft red winter premiums were again advanced in St. Louis territory reflecting limited supplies of this grade of wheat. Protein premiums ranging from 4.9 cents for 12 per cent to 23.28 cents for 14 per cent over December futures were paid on No. 1 dark northern wheat. Export demand held barley firm, $2.60 being paid in San Francisco for choice shipping, $2.25 for grading and $2.10 for feeding barley. Some samples of California barley were quoted $2.93-$3.48 a hundred pounds for October and November shipment in English markets. More favorable weather caused corn to go lower although limited supplies in world trade channels is beginning to be noted. Oats were firm to a little higher, rye steady but flax slightly lower.

Hay and Feed
No notable change in the trend of hay markets occurred. Declining corn prices and good pasture restricted demand for feeds, but price changes were not large.

Seeds
Redtop seed is reported moving faster at slightly higher prices to growers, clean seed bringing 10-11 cents a pound compared to 9 1/2 a month ago, and 21 a year ago. Timothy seed is moving slowly but prices are about 5 cents a hundred pounds higher than at the first of the month, or $2.65 compared with $1.65 last year, $6.55 in 1925 and $4.45 in 1924.

Wool
No change of importance was noted in the wool markets. A fair volume of domestic business is being done at present prices and the foreign situation is stronger.

Turkeys
Latest official information indicates five per cent fewer turkeys in the United States than last year. Canadian reports also indicate less turkeys than a year ago.

Eggs
The egg markets continue to improve. Storage supplies have been reduced below the 1926 figures and current receipts, particularly of good quality have been light for three months. Prices for higher grades at leading markets advanced 8-10 cents during the first three weeks of Oct., placing the market above 1926 for the first time in many months. Medium and lower grades and storage eggs are still below last year, however, and there are plenty of eggs still in storage and the volume of fall and winter production is still uncertain.

Butter
The general situation in butter markets was rather unsettled last week. Receipts were larger and the storage surplus increased. Production is still uncertain. The situation on the Pacific Coast was relatively stronger than in the east. The limited supply of high grade butter is strengthening factor.

Livestock
New high levels were registered in best grade steer prices last week, but not without resistance. Hogs declined sharply on larger receipts. Fat lamb prices went higher on lighter supplies and some prospect of decreased shipments for the next few weeks. Country demand for feeder lambs was broad and prices advanced.

DO YOU KNOW

That the chief food element in potatoes is starch? This is why potatoes are not best served with other starchy food such as rice and potatoes.

That fat is a food element lacking in potatoes. This is why potatoes need butter, cream or gravy to make them appetizing.

That intense heat necessary for cooking changes the water in potatoes to steam. This is why hot potatoes become soggy after draining if they are covered so that their steam cannot escape.

That pricking a potato to see if it is done lets out some of the steam and delays the baking. This is why it is better to test it by pinching instead of by breaking the skin.

That the mealiness of a baked potato depends mainly upon the amount of starch present? This is why early potatoes and very old ones are not good for baking, as they have more sugar and less starch.

That the most valuable part of a potato, the protein and mineral salts, lies directly under the skin? This is why cutting a thick paring off a potato is like throwing away twenty cents out of every dollar that the potatoes cost.

That when sprouts appear on a potato they are using starch and moisture and lessening the food values? This is why potatoes bought in quantities need to be watched to check sprouting.

That sweet potatoes should be cooked slowly and for a long time. This is why an hour of baking is none too much to develop the best flavor.

That sweet potatoes do not keep as well as Irish potatoes and cannot be shipped or stored in large quantities? This is why canning sweet potatoes has become an important industry.
