BORAH'S QUESTIONS

If Senator Borah lacks anything in statesmanship he makes up for it in his frankness of attitude toward public questions, particularly in relation to Prohibition. His recent letter to Senator Curtis, of Kansas, asking for the latter's views on Prohibition on four points was to the point itself, except in one part. He asked for Curtis' attitude on enforcement of Prohibition if elected. The other three questions, namely, whether or not Curtis favored a Prohibition plank, self-determination of states as to alcoholic content, and repeal of the Volstead Act or of the Eighteenth Amendment, were timely and consistent.

But the point of whether one would stand for or against enforcement is indeed abrupt, if not begging the question. Might one as well ask whether an executive would enforce any law as the Prohibition law. In other words, Senator Borah or any other sensible person may and should well assume that a candidate for the Presidency stands for enforcement and administration of all constituted laws, no matter of what nature. Enforcement of an existing law can not, by its very nature, be capable of being made an issue. The issue of enforcement became a settled fact with the passage of the law itself. Any other attitude would overturn the very foundation of orderly government.

Besides this, we doubt whether a President could obstruct the enforcement of Prohibition even if he were so inclined. There are too many checks and balances in the form of government. How one may feel about Prohibition from a legislative standpoint certainly should bear no relation to one's action if placed in an executive position sworn to uphold it. It is going a far way around to suggest that the American people would either recognize or tolerate a candidate for any high office who did not in the very first instance and thereafter at all times adhere to the principle of enforcement of the law until the people either obey it or repeal it. To this extent Senator Borah's question is needless. His other questions are interesting and may serve a helpful purpose in bringing out Senator Curtis and other candidates to a decisive stand.

MORE POWER TO HIM

A Los Angeles police officer advocates a system whereby criminals who steal $20,000 and get a parole after two years, be made to pay back the $20,000 by hard labor after the prison sentence has been served. This is merely an example, and may be applied to any kind of theft or sharp practice in any amount. More power to this gentleman we say!

DO YOU REMEMBER?

Do you remember—you older folk—St. Valentine's Day of old?

Do you remember the gorgeous Valentine cards, with hearts and flowers and ribbons?

Do you remember how you gave your nicest valentine to the one you loved best, or perhaps only one valentine to the only one you loved?

Do you remember the valentine you received—the one you cherished most—from the one you loved best, or perhaps from the only one you loved.

Surely you do remember. Certainly you can't forget. You remember the sweet innocence of your childhood days, crowned by lovely valentines.

Where are the valentines and all that they meant to you? Are the hearts still as red and as perfect? Are the flowers still alive and fresh? Are the ribbons still spotless and unsoiled? If so, you are fortunate—more than fortunate: you are still one to love and be loved.

Amid the rush of adult life is there still a Valentine in your life. Still a memory that has lasted; still love to bestow every day upon those about you? Have you a valentine whose memory can never fade? You have if you remember.

Presidential timber is the only kind you can conserve by thinning out.

In greater or less degree every man has his soul mortgaged to commercialism. The difference is, some have their notes nearer paid off than others.
