HILLSDALE.

Mr. and Mrs. D. N. Batty were delightful host and hostess to a number of their friends at cards Wednesday night. High score favor was taken by Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Bolton and was a two-quart porcelain coffee cup. An impromptu musical program was enjoyed and one of the guests entertained with several new and intricate dance steps. The guest list included Messrs. and Mesdames H. R. Hamilton, Al Johnston and T. Beardsley.

The sixtieth birthday of Mrs. M. Kehrl was made the occasion for a surprise party at her home in Hillsdale on March 27. Mrs. Kehrl was spending a quiet evening at home listening to the radio until informed by cries of "Happy birthday" that a birthday party was to be held in her honor. The party was planned by her relatives in Portland and Bethany and was attended by 33 of her relatives including her husband, children, her brothers, sisters, nieces and nephews. A pleasant evening was spent at games. A lunch was served at midnight and was featured by a huge cake decorated with sixty candles. This was followed by some vocal solos by Otto Zurbrug, accompanied at the piano by Hulda Zurbrug. His yodels and songs met the enthusiastic approval of everyone present. It was after 1:00 o'clock before people began to leave, after Mrs. Kehrl had expressed her appreciation of this observance of her birthday.

Federation wheat has not given as good results as Huston or Zimmerman under western Oregon conditions, but surpasses many other varieties in eastern Oregon. Federation is particularly poor in western Oregon when planted late, so farmers using this variety make every possible effort to get it in as early as possible.

Electric and gas bills can be paid in Multnomah. Why not have a telephone pay station here also? It is a great inconvenience to be obliged to go into Portland to attend to this each month, and if residents here would voice their request for a pay station the evil would no doubt be remedied by the company. "Systematic requesting" on the part of the patrons will bring results.

POTATO GRADING RULES DEFIED, HYSLOP CHARGES

In spite of the fact that Oregon produces more potatoes than are consumed, only 63 cars out of a total of 702, which were unloaded in Portland in 1927, came from points within the state. Of the 639 cars that came from other states, 501 were from Washington. Most of the others came from California, Idaho, Louisiana and Texas.

While Oregon is making some progress in balancing her agriculture to meet local needs, these facts show that much more can be accomplished, says G. R. Hyslop, chief in farm crops at the state college. To correct these conditions two things suggest themselves. First, Oregon farmers must put up a better grade of potatoes to meet outside competition; and second, the potato labeling law must be enforced to prevent the dumping of large quantities of culls from Yakima by peddlers and some of the chain stores.

While some of the chain stores are selling graded and branded Oregon potatoes, others are exploiting Yakima culls at so-called bargain prices in direct defiance of the potato grading law, he says. Others are putting potatoes in 49-pound packages to avoid the law which requires the labeling of 50 pounds and over.

FARM POINTERS

Indications are that Oregon will plant a slightly higher acreage of potatoes this year. Certified seed stock is moving out rapidly and inquiries at the experiment station have been unusually heavy this spring for the corrosive sublimate treatment, which is recommended as the best for dormant potatoes. A larger water supply is assured by the recent heavy rains and snows.

The best time for planting oats and vetch for hay in western Oregon is past except in the rich, cool, moist sections or where the altitude is very high, says the experiment station.

Field peas and spring grain are best planted by April 10 to 15 in the Willamette valley and coast sections. After that date spring grain is generally better for the summer hay crop.
