

COMMUNITY TREE ATTRACTS COMMENT

Aloha's Community Christmas tree has attracted favorable comment all over the county and many other towns are contemplating a tree for themselves.

Brilliantly lighted it can be seen for miles along the highway. It was made possible by the generosity of the business men who each donated toward furnishing the tree with ornaments and lights.

TWO MORE FAMILIES BUY ALOHA PROPERTY

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Johnson and daughter of Portland have purchased property on Tobias avenue in Aloha, and will move in this week. Mrs. Johnson's sister, Mrs. Earl Frizzell, of Los Angeles, Cal., and her husband, also purchased a home on Stacey avenue. They left this week for their home but will return after the first of the year to reside here.

Mrs. Johnson and Mrs. Frizzell are cousins of Mrs. W. F. Eisenberg and became interested in Aloha while visiting her this summer.

SNOW PLENTIFUL AT SAND POINT, IDAHO

Herman Zweiner and C. A. Boyer of Tigard, returned Saturday from a week's trip to Sand Point, Idaho, where Mr. Boyer is interested in some mines.

The weather was very cold and there was considerable snow. The sleds were out filled with young people who were having a wonderful time.

Although Mr. Zweiner and Mr. Boyer were in a closed car they suffered severely from the cold and were glad to get back to "dear old wet Oregon."

FANNO BRIDGE COMPLETED MONDAY

The bridge over Fanno creek, at Tigard, was finished Monday and the crew hauled away the surplus material.

A good feature of the bridge is the elevated sidewalks, five feet wide, on either side, with a railing, on the outside. The walks are about 8 inches higher than the bed of the bridge and it would be almost impossible for a car to mount the sidewalk unless it was going at an excessive speed.

Motorists will be glad to know that the highway is open again as repairs on the bridge has slowed up traffic for a couple of weeks.

EAST TIGARD

Mrs. Hammer is home again so the news has gone about the neighborhood, and each one so glad to see the cheery light from her window, and to know she has recovered from the sickness which put her to bed at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. C. Meyers of Portland.

Good news also from the H. T. Stewart hospital. Miss Beulah Butterfield, sister of Mrs. Stewart, has returned to Portland and to her work at the First National Bank. Mr. Stewart is at his office once more. Mrs. Stewart convalescing nicely but Marilyn must remain in bed a few days more; we are sorry Marilyn, but smile all you can.

Mrs. Ruth Stone, who went to the hospital four weeks ago, is home again convalescing and hoping to be able to resume her work at the store of H. Liebes & Co. in the early part of January.

C. L. Chilson who has been suffering with inflammatory rheumatism is resting easier under the care of Dr. Bissett.

Clarence Craw, grandson of Mrs. Hammer, made us a short call last week. He had been at Medford for the week taking charge of the Morning News while the editor was home with the flu, but was returning to the U. of O. in a few days where he is a junior.

Mrs. S. C. Berry and daughter, Miss Rowena, of Portland, were guests at the J. C. Berry home.

C. H. Pfaffle who has been confined to the house for four weeks with lumbago, is somewhat better and Mrs. Pfaffle feels much improved since her two weeks rest at Taft and Miss Marie is still nursing a case of grippe.

W. J. Hall of Taft was a guest at C. H. Pfaffle's this week while on his way to Portland to purchase a fish net for catching the Steel Head Salmon as the season is now open.

CARD OF THANKS

To my friends and neighbors I wish to express my heartfelt thanks for their kind expressions of sympathy, beautiful floral offerings and spiritual bouquets at the death of my beloved mother, Marie Schlecht.

Social Science Solution to Peace Problem

War Not Only Wicked, But Futile, Says Dr. Hall, President of University of Oregon, in Series of Articles

This is the second of a series of six articles written for this paper by Dr. Arnold Bennett Hall, president of the University of Oregon, on the problem of international peace. Dr. Hall is an authority in this field, and was one of the members of the Social Science Research Council of America.

By DR. ARNOLD BENNETT HALL
President, University of Oregon

May we now consider social control as applied to the problems of international politics. While conscious of the danger of using analogies from domestic life in the discussion of international affairs, I believe the foregoing discussion of social control as applied to domestic groups will help to a better understanding of the problems of social control as applied to the family of nations. Social control, as applied to international peace, would seem to be the control, within definite limits, of an individual nation by a group of nations. It would mean the acceptance of certain definite limits upon established doctrine of national sovereignty, but this is not as new as it would seem. Every civilized nation has entered into many treaties, and these treaties, under international law, are regarded as binding obligations. They therefore curtail certain specific limits upon the sovereign freedom of the signatory powers. Social control is merely an extension of that practice.

ably by the treaty-making process, to a larger group of independent states. It merely involves the extension of practices and theories that have been long existing and that experience has found to be of immense value to the participating powers.

Social control, as applied to international peace would seem to imply from this.

First, a will for peace among the dominant nations of the world. For practical purposes, this need not be universal. If the seven or eight most powerful nations of the world would agree that war was bad, that they would unite their forces in a common attack—commercial, economic, and military—against any nation that resorted to an aggressive war as an instrument of national policy, and if they could agree upon an instrumentality by which the question of fact could be determined, it seems unbelievable that any nation would attack such an invincible combination of military power. There is some ground to believe that a real will for peace exists among the leading nations of the world. There are several reasons that have contributed to this somewhat modern point of view.

As never before the peoples of the world seem convinced of the futility of war. Norman Angell's significant contribution in his book entitled "The Great Illusion," quite largely vindicated by the economic consequences of the world war, has shown that modern wars for the advancement of trade cannot succeed. International trade is a multi-lateral affair. One nation cannot be rich from international trade while other nations are too poor and weak to participate in international exchange. Norman Angell has argued convincingly that in the great war, England, Russia and France, on one hand, and Germany and Austria on the other, were killing their best customers, destroying the resources of the best markets, and impoverishing the very people whose prosperity contributed most to this channels of their trade.

It has not been many years, however, since many distinguished citizens sought to defend war on the basis of righteousness. They argued that when a righteous cause was involved, a nation was not only justified, but under moral obligation to appeal to the arbitration of the sword. Such an argument could not proceed under any other hypothesis than that a divine destiny presided over the battlefields of the nations, guaranteeing the victory of the righteous. But if that be true, then why prepare for war? And it is significant that those who shouted loudest in behalf of war for righteous causes were the most ardent defenders of the policy of preparedness. Such a theory is but one step removed from the early days when religious wars absorbed the energies of civilization and sacrificed the flower of the nation's youth. The war of the Huguenots was a futile struggle to determine on the field of battle the validity of contending theories of life, and eternal verities of life.

Man's Learning Lesson

But mankind has learned that principles of theology and that philosophical truth cannot be decided on the field of battle, when the mind is blinded by the passions of human hatred, but that the way to truth is through friendly counsel, sympathetic change of opinion, and an open-minded attitude toward the problems in controversy. So the question of international righteousness will not be solved by the fortunes of modern warfare, but by the sober and intelligent appeal to the thinking masses of mankind, unblinded by the passions and prejudices of war.

There is reason to hope that if people have realized the futility of war in the decision of philosophical controversy, so they are now realizing its futility as a reliable instrument for the determination of righteousness or an effective means for the building up of trade and the stimulation of prosperity.
