MARGARET GEHLERT FINDS HIT-AND-RUN DRIVER

Margaret Gehlert, formerly of Tigard, caused the arrest of a hit-and-run driver Friday in Portland, who otherwise might never have been found. She was sitting in her father's office at his Three X station at East 82nd and Stark streets trying to study her lessons, she attends Washington high school, when a man came in to use the phone while his car was being repaired. He acted nervous and while talking to a woman, apparently his sister, he broke down and cried. He sobbed out that he was a hit-and-run driver but cautioned her to say nothing. Margaret looked out of the window and jotted down the license number and after the man had gone told her father, F. K. Gehlert.

He was driving to town about 7 a. m. when his car hit a stretch of icy pavement and the rear end of the car slid down the bank 200 feet. He lost control of the steering gear but managed to step on the foot brake. When he reached the bottom of the hill the steering gear was bent in the shape of a V over his body. He was out and started looking for a urkey which he had in the car when the rescuing party reached him. He did not realize he was hurt, but an x-ray showed two ribs broken and one cracked and the doctor took 24 stitches in his scalp.

The sophomores served a cafeteria lunch Thursday by which they cleared $16.45 a sufficient sum to cover their class picture in the annual.

Makes Fine Imitation of Artificial Flower

The artificial flower trade, in which thousands of persons are engaged, has within the last few years been completely revolutionized, both here and abroad. For a long time the petals were made of muslin, silk, satin and even of velvet, colored after nature and successfully manipulated into the semblance of blossoms.

Of late years, however, there has been employed a substance that puts the most delicate textile materials ever manufactured completely in the background. It consists of the thin nest of thin shavings from the inner pith of an oriental palm that grows in Formosa, and can be compared to nothing so well as the almost transparent petal of a white poppy or a delicate tea rose. A tiny petal is heavy in comparison with this substance which has all the sheen and translucence and even the slightly frosted appearance seen in some white flowers.

It can be tinted far better than silk or muslin and is virtually indestructible. In wet weather it gives and becomes a little limp, just as real flowers do, but when the sun comes out it crisps, reasserts itself and takes on a new lease of life and beauty.

Here is one of the situations for which there is no adequate language available:

On a South Shore golf course there is a short hole with the green entirely surrounded by yawning sand pits. A threesome comes to it. The first player drops his tee shot on the green and feels pretty good over it. The second man puts his into one of the traps.

Then the third man got off one of those one-in-a-hundred pars miracles—a hole in one. The second niblick shot out of the bunker rolls into the cup.

And the first man takes two putts. Such is golf.—Boston Globe.
