THE EVOLUTION OF SERVICE

In the realm of community endeavor this is the age of service. The service club, the community or commercial club, and the chamber of commerce are active demonstrations of the instincts of citizens who have sought for a medium of cooperative expression. As a splendid counterpart, women's organizations for service have become an established part of community life.

What are the meanings of these organizations, why do they exist, and what are their purposes? The answer is found in the accomplishments of these organizations in making our communities better places in which to live and work and carry on the necessary functions of organized society.

Our town is no exception to the fact that every community needs groups working together for common ends of civic development, for objects of charity, for educational service, or for the still laudable purposes of fellowship and social advancement.

A city or town may well be known by its civic organizations. The efficient administration of their affairs, while not based upon legal requirements, is none the less important to the welfare of the community. The same care should be exercised in selecting their officers and directors as is displayed in the choosing of public officials by the ballot. As great a significance should be placed to the former as to the latter; because while public officials are curbed and guarded by codes and statutes, their integrity assured by bonds and their duties more or less clearly defined the civic leader is left more freely to his own discretion. In addition to this distinction there is the undeniable fact that local government and official action are in many cases affected for good or bad by the recommendation of the unofficial group.

Service has truly been an evolution. Men used to think and act alone as individual citizens. Heroic and dramatic as this attitude may have been, society did not advance so rapidly until the idea of the group became a leading factor in growth. And the remarkable part of this change is that the group does not lessen individuality but tends to increase it. Men become more dominant as leaders by working in the group. The civic and service organizations are simply the modern efficient channels thru which the ideals and aspirations of the individual find expression and become the achievements of all.

"LUCKY" LINDY

While the Prince of Wales has been falling from his horse, America's beloved Lindbergh has been falling in love. The endearing term "Lucky" as applied to the flying Colonel never had more significance than when his engagement was announced in reference to Ann Spencer Morrow, daughter of the United States Ambassador to Mexico.

The girl may well be called "Lucky" Ann. Yet the engagement itself is more than luck, it is good fortune. The plaudits of the world will go out to these young people. The same modesty has been shown in Lindbergh's love affair as has been exhibited thruout his career as an aviator of the first rank. And all will agree that any girl is lucky indeed to become engaged to a man of the type of Lindbergh. There may not be another Lindbergh, but there are many other young men who have similar qualities, so other girls have a chance also to secure as husbands young men of high order and ability.

A magnetic personality is sometimes also a dynamic speaker.

The cup of cheer that used to fill the heart with gladness now fills the stomach with pain and the head with foolish ideas.

In these days of Volsteadism there are too many bottles containing poison on the inside without having the red skull on the out.

HAZELDALE

Dean Alfred Powers of the U. of O. extension gave a very interesting and worth-while address on "The Egotism of Great Men" at the Literary open meeting last Tuesday. Dean Powers used specific examples of the greatest presidents, military leaders and literary men who had much "egotism" and then generalized by showing how important this characteristic is in our lives. Robert Haynes of Huber accompanied by Mrs. Mudden sang two delightful tenor solos, "Oft in the Stilly Night" and "The Desert Song." Miss Gladys Haskin very ably played two piano numbers and Mrs. Lemon gave a reading in her usual good style. The next regular meeting will be on Tuesday, February 26.
