WEEK END SPENT AT MT. HOOD BY L. A. T. A. CLUB

If 13 is supposed to be an unlucky number, we will take the liberty to change that idea. There were just 13 of us in our party and if anyone should say we didn't have a wonderful time, then there is no such a thing.

In the party were: Mary Crabtree, Mary Ramsby, Gladys Beyer, Gertrude Wahl, Esther Stroem, Marie Pfaffle, Mrs. Clem Blakney, Lester Gray, John Rankin, Wayne and Wendell Brewster, Ted Tontz and Mr. Clem Blakney. We all met in Portland and after arranging our baggage left at 8 o'clock sharp. We arrived at the Mazama Lodge, 4 miles below Government Camp, at about 10:30. At the Lodge the party were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Clem Blakney, who are members of the Mazamas, a mountaineering club of Portland. Everything is provided at the lodge but bedding, food and personal equipment.

Saturday evening we had a lunch and coffee, we popped kettles full of popcorn and enjoyed the fire in the huge fireplace. It was 1:30 when at last we were all in bed and 2:30 when silence reigned.

About 5:30 Clem Blakney made the fire and an hour later we got up to get breakfast. We left for Government Camp at 9:30 and went to Everett Sicklers place. He owns Battle Axe Inn and the new recreation building just above the Inn. We helped clean out the toboggan slide as it was not ready for use when we arrived. For our efforts we were given 4 toboggan sleds for as long as we cared to use them. When the waiting line got too large we quit and most of us got too large.

Some of the party including Mrs. Blakney skied over to Swim, and as we couldn't ski back up hill we had to walk, the snow being nice and soft to fall in, and oh so wet! The rest of the party went with Mr. Blakney to see the ski tournament. We had our big Sunday dinner at the lodge and say how we did eat after all our strenuous work. After cleaning up all the dishes, the boys were dishwashers sweeping the floors and cleaning up the lodge in general we began to pack up to start home. We really would like to have stayed the rest of the week, but since that was impossible we have decided to go again some Sunday, real early, and stay all day till late.

The week end was perfect and we will all remember and FEEL the trip for some time.

On the 8th of February our basketball team played their first game, a practice game with the Tigard high school team. The score was 16 to 35 in the high schools favor. We have a fine team and with as much playing and practicing as we can possibly get in this season, we should be able to make quite a record for ourselves next season. We have as yet not succeeded in getting a place to practice regularly. We invite any team to play with us if a place can be arranged in which to play. Call Tigard 03151, Mary Crabtree.

Our next meeting will be on the 5th of March. If you are planning on that next Mt. Hood trip be at Judge Noyes office at 8 o'clock sharp. We will pick you up as we meet at the homes of the members.

Why Worry?

Some one remarked to Shaw, on seeing a lot of wealthy loungers hanging around a London hotel: "These rich people get me! What's the use of having money if you don't know how to enjoy it?"

"But why fret about it, old chap?" returned Shaw. "Are you any better off? What's the use of knowing how to enjoy money if you haven't any?" —Vancouver Province.

Saving the Sequoias

In order to protect the last of the "Big Trees" the government has established two national parks, Sequoia and General Grant, containing some of the most interesting groves now left. In Sequoia National park along there are scores of sequoia trees 20 to 30 feet in diameter, with a few still larger, and thousands with a diameter of more than ten feet. This park contains the largest of them all. General Grant park, an area of only four square miles, contains a magnificent grove of sequoias in addition to the one for which it is named. There are also three groves of the "Big Trees" in the Yosemite National park. One of them contains the famous Wawona tree, through which a motor road runs.

Uses of Education

Bees call their several sweets from this flower and that blossom, here and there where they find them, but themselves afterwards make the honey, which is all and purely their own, and no more thine and marjoram; so the several fragments he borrows from others, he will transform and shuttle together to compile a work that shall be absolutely his own; that is to say, his judgment; his instruction, labor, and study tend to nothing else but to form that. He is not obliged to discover whence he got the materials that have assisted him, but only to produce what he has himself done with them. —Montaigne in "Of Education."

That Wouldn't Do

Weary William was on the point of securing a new job—or, rather, his wife had secured it—and Weary William was in imminent danger of setting down to it.

His account of the past few months, spent in drawing unemployment benefits, had not impressed his prospective employer, but the latter decided to give him a chance.

"Very well, you can have the job," William was told, "and you'll be paid just what you're worth."

"What! I'm worth, governor?" he repeated. "That won't do at all! The wife told me to get a divin' wage!"

All the Difference

The clock had just struck twelve when Henpeck inserted his latekey and let himself into his suburban villa. His wife was ready for him.

"Where have you been, I'd like to know?" she snapped.

"I—er—er—" began Henpeck hesitatingly, when he was interrupted.

"Yes, go on. I suppose you'll tell me you've been to see a sick friend—holding his hand all the evening?"

"Oh, no, my dear," replied the erring husband sadly. "If I'd been holding his hand, I would have made some money." —Pittsburgh Sun Telegraph.

Home Manufacture

A radio-loving family has been greatly annoyed lately by a man in the neighborhood who has an electric work shop, saw, lathe and so on. He was running it full-blast one evening when one of the family, giving up the radio in despair, complained: "I wonder what on earth he's making." Then up spoke five-year-old Bobby. "I know," he asserted, "he's making static!"

Oldest Christian Symbol

The fish is considered the oldest symbol of Christianity. When the pagans became Christians they were afraid of being persecuted and put to death by those who still believed in pagan gods; so they invented a secret sign, giving it the form of a fish. When they wanted to make their new belief known to each other and wanted to find out whether the man with whom they associated was pagan or Christian, they drew the sign of the fish in the sand, and if the person responded in the same way, they felt secure to speak of their new faith.

Ideal Sense of Humor

Cultivate a sense of humor—not the harmful humor that only takes delight in the confusion or humiliation of others—but that humor which enables a man to laugh at himself and hold himself in proper proportion, a man who sees the bright side and communicates the brightness to others. —E. W. Beatty.

Norse Names Common in Parts of Scotland

Professor Brøgger, of Oslo university, in a lecture at Edinburgh university, commented on the striking fact that the majority of the place names in the Shetlands and Orkneys were of Norse character. A scrutiny of the old Norse farm names revealed certain types of names which had been most used in the Shetlands, Orkneys, Caithness and the Hebrides. Names in Norway were not only chronological, but also indicative of the social position held by the families in Norway. Further, their geographical limit was sharply defined and for that reason it was possible to conclude from which parts of Norway the emigration was greatest.

This proved to have been the southwestern coasts of Norway (Agder, Rogaland), and the northwestern (More). In the Agder coast districts in recent years a number of farm sites which had been examined proved to have belonged to an older Iron age, and seemed to have been deserted in the Seventy-eighth centuries. They were usually situated in districts which were no longer cultivated. In all probability a number of these remains were relics of the emigrants.

Small Boy Had Found Perfectly Safe Place

It was the evening rush hour. An intensive throng, regardless of everything but their desire to get home as soon and as best they could, stormed the various entrances to the subway elevated trains as they pulled into the central city stations.

The stroller was standing in the vestibule of the last car of the train. All seats, aisles and corners were crammed with humanity, a seething mass. At Eighth street the door opened to permit a few more to crowd in. A transit employee helped by shoveling them along.

"Cut that pushing! There's a little boy here. Ain't you got any better sense?" This from an irate father, who was trying to shield his boy from the struggling mass.

The child, undismayed by all this anxiety and turbulence, smiled at his parent.

"Don't worry, daddy; they can't hurt me."

He had crawled under the overflow of his father's stomach.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Samoa Tattooing

The art of tattooing still flourishes in the Samoa Islands where the natives tattoo their bodies from the hips to the knees. A tattooer's profession is very lucrative. His instruments resemble combs, and are made of human bones of different sizes. The operation takes from two to three months, during which time a patient remains in the same retired place. All this time the relatives of the young person bring mats, money and food, but if the quantity does not suit the tattooer, he "goes on strike," refusing to proceed until sufficient liberality is displayed. The requisite gifts are sure to be brought, for no Samoa could endure going half tattooed.

Odd Methods of Fishing

There are many ways of catching fish, but one of the quaintest methods is that revealed by natives to the administrator of New Guinea, on a tour of the territory. At Hetan the natives gave an exhibition of kite fishing for gars. The kites, constructed of pandanus leaf, and shaped like huge birds, are flown from canoes, the motion of which makes the kites' tails skip along the surface of the water. A "spider's" web is attached in which the fish become entangled. Often 50 fish are caught with one kite in a day. The natives also stupefy fish with drugs.

Oldest Dated Statuette

A jade figure in the Smithsonian Institution is said to be the oldest object found in America. It is known as the Tuxtla statuette. This object was found in the state of Vera Cruz, Mexico. It is carved from jadeite, and represents a birdlike deity with human head. On the front and sides are Maya hieroglyphics, including one corresponding to the date 98 B. C., which makes the Tuxtla statuette the oldest dated monument thus far found in America. The Institution has thousands without date which are much older.

BOY CHARGED WITH THEFT OF OVERCOAT

Fred Love, a 15 year old boy, who has been residing with L. M. Galbreath at Bonita was arrested February 11th by W. A. Carter on complaint of E. Hoffarber. The boy was charged with the theft of a fifty dollar overcoat and one dollar in cash. Young Love was taken to Hillsboro and bound over to the grand jury.
