Notice to the public

SUPPOSE you are today paying 50c a tube for your tooth paste (and there are many very good dentifrices selling today at that price).

Suppose, like most people, you buy about twelve tubes during a year. Now if you knew that you could buy as good a dentifrice as can be made and still save each year the price of 25 loaves of bread or 60 bars of soap or 40 pounds of sugar or a box of fine cigars—could you conscientiously fail to take advantage of such an opportunity?

That is exactly what you do when you buy Listerine Tooth Paste at 25c for a large tube. Figure it out for yourself.

CARE OF ESTABLISHED ALFALFA FIELDS

By O. T. McWhorter, County Agent
Cultivation is necessary for the longevity of alfalfa and for the securing of the largest yields of hay. Cultivate after each crop of hay and in the fall after the first rains have softened the soil to a depth of a few inches. Do not try to cultivate too deeply. Two to three inches of the top soil is enough to loosen.

Where cultivation has been omitted in the past, soil in alfalfa fields may have become firm and badly covered with grasses making cultivation very difficult during the dry season following the cutting of crops of hay. In cases of this kind alfalfa may be cultivated in the fall immediately following the first rains and after the last cutting of hay has been removed, or such fields may be cultivated in the early spring if the ground becomes dry enough before the alfalfa starts growing, then followed by the usual cultivation immediately after removing each crop of hay. It is said that early spring cultivation causes more damage to the crowns of alfalfa than at later dates because the alfalfa crowns are softened at that time.

LAND PLASTER FOR ALFALFA
Land plaster should be used on alfalfa each spring, and preferably early, at the rate of 80 to 100 pounds per acre. A few farmers are using superphosphate at the rate of 250 pounds per acre but this is applied once about every four years. When superphosphate is used the land plaster may be omitted.

Superphosphate is still in the trial stage on many soil types of the county. In one locality the crop on low yielding alfalfa fields has been doubled, but this has not been proven the case in all parts of the county. Superphosphate, however, will no doubt be used more and more on old alfalfa fields where the yield of hay is on the decrease. Actual trial of superphosphate on such fields will determine its value for a given locality or farm.

EAST TIGARD

The regular meeting of the East Tigard Community club was held last Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. Berry. The president, Mrs. Florence Hammer, being absent, Mrs. Berry was chosen chairman pro tem. While the attendance was not large, the whole-hearted interest was equal to a big room full. As correct signboards, naming our highway, was the first work chosen by the club. It has become one of great interest, and there seems to be an unanimous feeling that "We will fight it out on this line if it takes all summer."

A neighborhood flower show was discussed, but arrangements for same was postponed till a later date. Anyone contemplating buying delphinium plants can make a saving by seeing the president. The Delphinium is the club flower chosen some months ago.

Mrs. C. H. Pfaffle returned home last week from Kelso, Wash. where she was visiting with her son and family Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Pfaffle.

MICHELANGELO (Clara B. Smith)

In our mad rush for practical things may we pause to give honor to one who, ages ago, spent a whole lifetime in frantic striving to accomplish something which would be worthwhile for all time. Michelangelo was born March sixth, 1475, at Caprese, Italy.

Michelangelo's mother died when he was six years old. Some years later his father married again. Michelangelo had four brothers. They were all sent to school in Florence, but he busied himself only in drawing and neglected everything else. Because of this he greatly irritated his father and his uncles, and they often beat him cruelly, for they hated the profession of an artist. However, the father, like the boy was more violent than obstinate and soon allowed his son to follow his vocation. At the age of thirteen he entered the studio of Domenico and David Ghirlandajo which was the most famous studio in Florence.

After a year spent in this environment Michelangelo went to the school of Bertoldo. This was for the study of sculpture. After a year of feeling his way he was drawn toward sculpture with irresistible force. Never afterward did he consider painting. But he did those in spite of himself. He never wished to be considered anything but a sculptor.

Michelangelo's works seem to be a mixture of paganism and Christian faith. He had been brought up very religiously by his father and later, had listened to the fiery sermons of Savonarola. Yet surrounded by the atmosphere of lofty paganism he became intoxicated with the classic idea and made the heroic forms of Greece live again.

The cause of much of Michelangelo's grief was his habit of undertaking immense tasks and without waiting to complete them accepting other commissions which were abandoned along the way. At one time he undertook to make twelve statues, but began only one, a St. Matthew which was never finished.

Michelangelo was called to Rome to build the tomb of Pope Julius the second. He labored in the mountain of Carrara for eleven months getting the great slabs of marble and then was disappointed. At the order of Julius the second the tomb was abandoned. Michelangelo fled to Florence in anger and it was not till years later the Pope succeeded in coaxing him to return. Julius the second insisted on his making a huge bronze statue which was a failure as the artist knew nothing of bronze. Then he was ordered to paint the ceiling of the Sistine Chapel, a sculptor who knew nothing of the technique of fresco. At last the task was begun but it would probably never have been finished had not Julius the second kept the painter at work. It is impossible to truly describe the "Last Judgement." There has never been anything like it.

Near the close of his life Michelangelo thought only of the glory of God. For seventeen years he labored without pay on the building of that temple of temples, St. Peter's Cathedral in Rome.

Michelangelo never lacked illustrious friends. He was always in close touch with the best among the nobles and princes of his time. But the best of his heart was kept for his kin and a few humble friends. He never married but after the death of his favorite brother he took full charge of the education of the brother's children. He always cared for his own father until his death. Later when he found himself alone once more, he was given charge of the sons of a very dear friend. His godson he took to live with him and had him taught all that a father would have wished him to learn. His enemies accused him of avarice but this was probably due to his almost sordid manner of living and constant complaints of poverty, although he was really rich. But his generosity was unlimited.

Michelangelo worked until death, in 1564. The Pope had intended to have the artist's body placed in St. Peter's but Michelangelo had expressed a desire to return to Florence for burial. The Romans would not allow the body to be taken away, so it was wrapped secretly in a roll of cloth and sent to Florence as merchandise. The artists of Florence carried it by torchlight to the church of Santa Croce. The crowd was so great that they could hardly force their way through the church. The coffin was opened and Michelangelo seemed asleep. He was dressed in black velvet, a felt hat on his head, and on his feet boots and spurs, just as while living he had the habit of sleeping, dressed and ready to rise and take up his work. For a monument a great tower was erected to which each sculptor of Florence brought his stone. It was a splendid thought to associate all the world of artists to do homage to the man whom Italy considered the God of Art.
