WASHINGTON COUNTY AGENT TO HAVE ASSISTANT

William F. Cyrus, for the past five years agricultural instructor in the McMinnville high school, was appointed this week to the position of assistant county agent in Washington county, according to an announcement released by the Board of Regents of the Oregon State Agricultural College. Mr. Cyrus is considered highly qualified to take up the work as assistant to county agent McWhorter. He was born and reared on a farm in Linn county and is thoroughly familiar with the Willamette valley agriculture. During the past five years he has conducted adult agricultural classes and agricultural projects among high school boys on farms in Yamhill county. He was graduated from the Oregon Agricultural College in the class of 1922 majoring in animal husbandry.

Prior to taking up work at McMinnville, he was teacher of agriculture in the Elgin high school in eastern Oregon. During the seven years that he has been in agricultural teaching work he has trained numerous live stock judging teams and his teams have taken high rank in competition with other student judging teams from various sections of the Northwest at the Pacific International Livestock Show. Because of this background in live stock and crops work under Willamette valley conditions, it is felt Mr. Cyrus is well qualified to take up the training of boys' and girls' 4-H livestock and crops clubs to which it is proposed that he will devote at least 50 per cent of his time.

"I feel we are very fortunate in obtaining a man of Mr. Cyrus' training and experience," county agent McWhorter said today. "At McMinnville his standing is very high among both rancher and business men. Mr. Cyrus is establishing his residence in Hillsboro and started work March 18. Mrs. Cyrus in a Willamette valley girl. They have three children."

THE GRAND CANYON AND ITS SURVEY

Cecil W. Emmons

It was into this wonderful country, steeped in the romance of mystery and legends, 388 years after the first explorers had disturbed its brooding solitude, that another band of men ventured, seeking not the "Cities of Gold" but something indefinitely more valuable - another link to weld into the chain of travelers' inquiries. The route of these explorers was well defined, so that others might follow in their footsteps, but, unlike their predecessors, their objective was founded in fact - not fable. In due course the surveying party, for it was such, blazing the boundaries of the Grand Canyon National Park which incloses one of the world's greatest spectacles.

It is impossible to compare it with the tremendous white spectacle of the Himalayas, or with the House of Everlasting Fire of the Hawaii National Park, or the 17,000 feet of snow and glacier which rise abruptly between the observers' eyes and the summit of Mt. McKinley, because it has nothing in common with any of these. But of its own kind there is nothing in the world which approaches it in form, size, and glowing color; it is much the greatest example of stream erosion. And in its power to rouse the emotion of the looker on, to strefify or to exhilarate, it has no equal of any kind anywhere, unless it be the starry firmament itself.

The boundaries inclose 56 miles of the Grand Canyon stretching west of its beginning at the mouth of the Marble Canyon. Through it winds the Colorado River for a distance of 103 miles. The Grand Canyon National Park is in northern Arizona and from rim to rim that portion of the canyon within the park varies from 4 to 18 miles in width; it is more than a mile deep measured from the north rim, which averages nearly a thousand feet higher than the south rim. The park boundaries hug the rims closely. The northern rim is heavily forested with pine, fir, cedar and spruce, interspersed with beautiful glades of quaking aspen. The southern rim carries a slender semiorid flowering vegetation of rich beauty and wide variety and southeast of the Santa Fe railroad station at Grand Canyon lies about 50 square miles of fine yellow pine forest. The eastern boundary includes the lofty painted walls east of which lies the Painted Desert. Its western boundary includes the broad Havasu Canyon, tributary from the south, in whose depths we find the Havasupai India Reservation and a group of fine waterfalls markedly different from any in our other national parks.

To describe the Grand Canyon National Park is as impossible as it is unnecessary. Few national spectacles have been so fully pictured, few are so familiar even to the untraveled. As I traveled through the woods and forests or through its kly bottomed canyons over plateaus to those windy promontories this spectacle was always at my feet, disclosed in the sublimity of its tempted depths, in the bewildering glory of its gorgeous coloring. There is no preparation of mind to spirit. To some the revelation is a shock, no matter what the expectation. The rim of the Grand Canyon is one of the stillest places on earth, even when it is crowded with people. Its motionless unreality is one of the first and most powerful impressions it makes and yet the Grand Canyon is really a motion picture. There is no moment that it does not change. Always its shadows are insensibly altering, disappearing here, appearing there, lengthening here, shortening there. There is a continual movement. With every quarter hour its difference may be measured.

FORMAL OPENING OF FINANCE BUILDING HELD WEDNESDAY

An event of much more than ordinary significance to the people of this district was the opening Wednesday evening at Aloha, of the new Aloha Finance Corporation building for public inspection and the transaction of business. The new building is of brick construction, equipped with a modern fire proof vault. The interior is finished and completely furnished in excellent shape and everything is strictly modern. In fact this office easily ranks first in beauty, convenience and equipment with any financial institution west of Portland and the people of Beaverton, Aloha and Huber are justly proud of this new business institution as is very materially evidenced by the wholehearted support and co-operation extended by them.

The officers of the Aloha Finance Corporation are: President and General Manager C. J. Stickney; secretary E. E. Fitzwater, of the Multnomah Commercial & Savings Bank; Treasurer, Homer V. Carpenter, of the Guardian Building & Loan Association of Portland. Chas. W. Broom of Aloha, an able and experienced accountant, will be an assistant to Mr. Stickney and have charge of the office detail work.

In addition to real estate, lotns, insurance of all kinds, safe deposit boxes, etc., the Aloha Finance Corporation will also handle a branch office of the Guardian Building & Loan association of Portland and is authorized to transact a complete savings and loan business. On the opening day this new institution started with a volume of 163 guardian 6 per cent savings accounts and Mr. Stickney predicts this will be increased to 300 within a short time.

Delegations from Portland and Hillsboro joined with local people in an inspection of the new institution Wednesday evening and enjoyed punch, wafers and radio entertainment provided by the officers.
