PULL TOGETHER

If the citizens and residents of a town do not pull together how can they expect strangers to think well of their own community? True, every town has people who have disagreeable characteristics. Each one of us is "peculiar" in some respect in the mind of the "other fellow." But even if it is the truth, we should not say evil things of our fellow-townsmen.

Far better be like the Scotch, of whom Dr. Samuel Johnson said that no matter how big a rogue a man was in Scotland, all other Scotchmen sang his praises to every stranger in their precincts, simply because the rascal was their fellow-countryman. It is better to be like the Scotch, even straining our veracity, at least in a harmless way, than be like the Irish of whom this same sage facetiously said: "I love the Irish because they are so honest; they never speak well of each other."

All of us that know Mrs. So and So should not let her chickens ruin the spring garden, but we should remember that the chickens themselves are things of practical value even if fortgers in manner and predatory in disposition. We should be thankful we do not live in a country or neighborhood among the nabobs whose peacocks wake up the inhabitants with their screeches and roost all day on the front porch, and which serve no useful purpose except to satisfy the vanity of their owners.

Learning to look for the good in our neighborhood (and such good there is to be found) is quality that will reap a harvest of benefits. A town divided against itself can never rise to the height to which its natural situation would otherwise permit it. Forgetting our differences in petty affairs, or even in matters of magnitude, is absolutely necessary if we are to pull together.

To be blinded by prejudice is a condition that harms most him who is afflicted. Having eyes with which to see, minds with which to think and enthusiasm with which to work, no job is too big for our town in a public way.

TOO MUCH DETAIL

A Chicago man collapsed and died in making his monthly rounds to collect interest from 35 different banks. Maybe Carnegie was right after all, when he said it was better to put all of your eggs in one basket and then watch that basket.

Notice to the public

SUPPOSE you are today paying 50c a tube for your tooth paste (and there are many very good dentifrices selling today at that price).

Suppose, like most people, you buy about twelve tubes during a year. Now if you knew that you could buy as good a dentifrice as can be made and still save each year the price of 25 loaves of bread or 60 bars of soap or 40 pounds of sugar or a box of fine cigars—could you conscientiously fail to take advantage of such an opportunity?

That is exactly what you do when you buy Listerine Tooth Paste at 25c for a large tube. Figure it out for yourself.
