KEEPING UP WITH THE JONES ACT

One of the real tests of the prohibition law has come in the form of the Jones Act, a federal statute increasing the penalties of the Volstead law to a higher degree of felony, or with a maximum punishment of $10,000 fine or five years imprisonment, or both. It will be a real test because the final test of any law is its enforcement. If the citizens of the United States, thru their federal trial juries, want to put a stop to the illicit liquor business they can come nearer doing it with the Jones Act than with any other enforcement measure since the advent of prohibition as a national regulation. If they do not desire prohibition as it relates to intoxicants as beverages the severity of the Jones penal clauses will be their tacit excuse for wholesale acquittals.

One interesting phase of the subject will be the stand the various states will take in regard to adopting the provisions of the Act for the state and municipal courts. It is improbable that the state constitutions will permit the automatic adoption of these penalties without reenactments or special legislation by state legislatures. If that is found to be the case the sentiment of the states will be reflected by their legislative action or failure of action in this regard. If the states adopt the Jones Act penalties, and they are imposed upon what is called the "little fellows," juries may be even more reluctant to convict. This would bring about a deplorable condition of enforcement and be worse than no Jones Act.

No law ever went further than the people wanted it to go, at least for any great length of time. Legislation, however restrictive, in the end finds itself on a level with public thought and opinion and with the social and moral standards of society. The pendulums of laxity on the one hand and of severity on the other swing back and forth only to the points of temporary excitement and popular interest. Prohibition will be what the people make it, either a success or a failure. If there are not enough people to make it a success, or if thru carelessness or indifference to public administration the majority let apathy rule where thoughtfulness should govern, no amount of increases in penal clauses will avail on the side of prohibition.

Federal courts will be handicapped without the adoption of similar provisions by the states. The real test will come when the state courts are given power to impose penalties provided by the Jones Act, and enforcement is given its trial in local jurisdictions.

GREAT MEN'S BIRTHDAYS

It is unfortunate that the people cannot devote themselves to observances of the birthdays of more great characters of history. Perhaps it might be well to eliminate so many special "weeks" and give opportunity for more special programs in honor of men and women who have accomplished things worthy of remembrance. Only a few outstanding characters are thus remembered so far as is concerned birthday observances. Washington and Lincoln are the subjects of legal holidays. Thomas Jefferson is remembered often with more than passing notice. Robert E. Lee's birthday is observed with considerable degree of devotion. But a few more names would tell the story. One has to consult his almanac too often to remember who was who.

Maybe some of the cities the Mexicans are fighting for aren't worth fighting for.

In the interest of peace the United States decided to send 10,000 rifles and 10,000,000 rounds of ammunition to Mexico. This ought to bring peace with the manufacturers of munitions.

Trouble seldom come singly because it generally takes two to make it.

The biggest boost you can give our town is trading in it, and supporting its institutions for good.

Some people spend their evening at the same place they spend their week's earnings.

A business serves in proportion to the support given it. Support is given a business in proportion to the service it renders. Neither side should wait for the other to start.

PURCHASING POWER

Without regard to price, distance or delay, and granting that home pride and community duty did not enter into the question, we still would say that your dollar has greater purchasing power when spent in the home community than when spent out of it. No prodigy in mathematics is necessary to figure out the simple proposition that a dollar spent in our town is a dollar invested.

Communities have no protecting tariffs or trade treaties, or revenue collecting measures as have nations. But when you buy away from home you pay for it. The tariff you pay is the loss in general prosperity of the home town; and every citizen, by virtue of the convenience, service and protection that his home community affords him, engages at least in a moral treaty with his fellow citizens.

HAZELDALE

The Hazeldale Literary Society held a regular meeting last Tuesday night, March 26. Plans were discussed for the minstrel show to be sponsored soon by the society. Misses Anna Rowell and Jean Smith were in charge of entertainment for the evening. The program consisted of banjo selections by Courtney Syverson; life and works of O'Henry by Jean Smith; vocal solo by Mrs. J. C. Smith; reading by Anna Rowell and Hazeldale Hornet by Harley Taylor. A very enjoyable spelling match ensued in which Eunice Motherall won the prize, a large Easter egg. Open meeting will be held next Tuesday evening, April 9.

A number of the residents of Hazeldale attended a concert and dance given by the social club of the Daughters of Scotia in Portland on Friday evening. An enjoyable feature of the program were the vocal solos by Merwin Dant of Portland, formerly of Beaverton.

TUALATIN

The annual sermon of Rev. H. P. Blake on the day of his ninety-sixth birthday anniversary was an event of Easter Sunday at the Methodist community church. The church was well filled with friends of Rev. Blake and his message was highly interesting. Preceding the sermon was an Easter service given by the Sunday school which was well received. The Wincna Grange of which Rev. Blake is a member presented him with an Easter lily plant. A basket luncheon partaken of by about eighty-five followed the sermon. Miss Dorothy Heimbach baked the birthday cake which was a very large one with special decorations and in pyramid form. Among those present from a distance were Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Larson of Woodburn, Mrs. Henry Judd and children of near Oregon City and many others.

The Tualatin Heights Chickery received a shipment of one case of hatching eggs Tuesday from the I. A. Hanson Poultry Farm of Corvallis.

The O. B. Krause family spent Easter Sunday at the home of Mrs. Krause's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Ficken of Pleasant Hill. The children indulged in an Easter egg hunt and all had a very pleasant day.

Ernest Heimbach, teacher in the high school at Sheridan was at home Easter with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Heimbach.

Mrs. Hawxhurst, mother of W. R. Hawxhurst with her daughter, Mrs. J. W. Mann of Washington are here from California for a visit as they are enroute for the home of Mrs. Mann.
