WORK OF MOVING ALOHA BUILDINGS HELD UP

The procedure used to move the buildings back from the highway at Aloha is proving rather disgusting as well as inconvenient to some of the merchants. Mr. Sidwell reports that the contractor Frank Hewitt put a crew of men to work Friday to move his station. They disconnected his gas and water pipes, leaving but one gas tank open, jacked up the building and went home. Monday they returned doing just enough more work before quitting to extinguish all possibilities of doing any business. Mr. Sidwell put in a complaint to the highway engineer and it is hoped the balance of the moving will not affect the regular business.

The new size bills will be out soon. They are small but just as powerful. Like the modern men, physical means little in the world of business.

The Hearst papers are going after Prohibition. If they are after real temperance they are to be congratulated.
