FARM POINTERS

Time of picking is a vital factor in obtaining both fresh and canned cherries in Oregon, finds the experiment station in extensive research just completed on this crop. A test of maturity was devised which, if followed, insures better quality and larger tonnage, as a few days just before picking greatly influences the weight of cherries. This fruit does not ripen off the tree, hence the importance of having proper maturity at picking time.

Canker infection of apple trees usually follows severe late woolly aphid infestations, finds the Oregon experiment station, although the degree of predisposition to canker infection resulting from early or slight aphid attacks is not entirely known.

In discussing the treatment of sheep and goats for stomach worms and liver flukes, the Oregon experiment station warns growers that every remedy which will destroy these parasites is more or less poisonous and advises against their use without reasonable certainty that the worms are present. Careful observation of the flock, with treatment upon the first appearance of symptoms is advised, as sheep and goats which are allowed to become thin and weak are unprofitable, even after the worms have been destroyed.

Bulk handling of grain is now rapidly replacing the sack handling method in the northwest, reports the Oregon experiment station. The change from the old laborious sack handling method has been advocated for the last 25 or 30 years, but it is only during the last five years that general progress has been made.

Among all the delightful performance characteristics of the Outstanding Chevrolet—none is creating more widespread enthusiasm than its thrilling speed and flashing acceleration!

The great new six-cylinder valve-in-head engine responds to the accelerator with an eagerness that is literally amazing. Touring speeds are negotiated with such smooth, silent, effortless ease that you almost forget there's a motor under the hood. And when the throttle is opened wide—the pace is faster than the most experienced driver would care to maintain!

Back of this exceptional performance is a brilliant array of engineering advancements—typified by a high-compression, non-detonating cylinder head... automatic acceleration pump... hot-spot manifold... semi-automatic spark control... and a heavier crankshaft, statically and dynamically balanced.
