HITEON SCRATCHES

Grandpa Kray who fell and injured his head last Thursday was moved to St. Vincent hospital Monday. It is not thought his injuries are serious.

Miss Effie VanKleck who is "hello" girl at Tigard has been staying there during the storm.

Miss Thora Nielsen of Tigard spent Monday and Tuesday with her cousin Elizabeth Struthers.

On account of the storm Miss Enschede was unable to get to her home in Forest Grove Friday so re-

maintained in Hiteon over the week end

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Christensen of Tigard were Sunday guests at the Geo. Anderson home.

Everett Metzentine entertained a number of his friends at a birthday party Monday evening.

Our mail carrier failed to get through the drifts for three days last week but was on hand Monday morning.

Speaking of drifts we have plenty of snow, freezing weather and wind in Hiteon but we are taking it "cool" and patiently waiting for the spring time.

DURHAM

Mrs. James Nokes is still on the sick list.

School was dismissed last Wednesday evening on account of the snow storm and as conditions have not improved there will probably be no school all this week.

J. C. Bilyeu and C. A. Cabe were among those seen taking sled rides Sunday.

Quite a few children in this neighborhood are reported sick with colds.

Mrs. Wentworth, of Houlton, was house guest of Mrs. Charles Johnson last week and spent some time calling on former neighbors.

Mr. Anderson, principal of our school, boarded the train last Wednesday evening for Eugene to spend then enforced vacation with Mrs. Anderson who teaches near there.

Mrs. Paul Heden attended a tea given at the home of her sister, Miss Ada Sandberg, in Portland one day last week.

The Oregon Electric R. R. might be included with the plumbers and fuel men as "Singin' in the Snow", as most of the flivver folks are patronizing their trains.

Plants That Breathe Gas

Not at All Uncommon

When one speaks of a "gas plant" one naturally thinks of coal ovens and gas meters. Nature, however, provides a real gas plant, specimens of which are to be found blooming in London's Kew gardens. It is other wise known as the Peltandra or "Burning Bush." When a lighted match is applied to a shoot of it there comes a brilliant scarlet flame. Like a flash of lightning it travels up the length of the flowering shoot, without injuring it. The best time to make the experiment is when the flowers are fading. The inflammability of the plant is due to this: that on its stalks are minute reddish-brown glands, and these secrete an etheric oil. The glands develop fully soon after the blossom begins to fade, but they shrivel up when the fruit begins to form. Luminous plants not unlike this have been a source of strange legends in India and Afghanistan. There is a mountain called Sufed Koll in Afghanistan on which the natives believe that gold and silver exist. In springtime the slopes are covered with bushes which at night, from a distance, seem to be on fire, yet when you are close to them there is no sign of flame.

Buried With His Five Wives

In a country town not more than ten miles from Springfield, Ill., is a cemetery near the roadside where ancient stones, moss-covered and weather-beaten, attract the passerby who may be interested in curious epitaphs. In the center of one lot is a large monument on which is inscribed:

"Here lies John Jones, aged ninety-two. At rest." On the side of the monument are five small stones exactly alike, each bearing the name of a woman and date of death and each having this inscription: "Beloved wife of John Jones."—Springfield Republican.

Eyes Never Sleep

What could be more inactive than a person's eyes while he is sleeping soundly? But Prof. Walter R. Miles, a Stanford university psychologist, has completed researches on the state of the eyes during sleep which indicate that the eye muscles perform definite work while the lids are closed. The pupils contract, the eyes are rolled up in the head, then the muscles surrounding the eye pucker up. None of these are relaxation, as commonly supposed. In fact Professor Miles believes that our entire sensory system is more or less active during sleep.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Excursion Fares to

California Announced

Midwinter excursion fares to California from Oregon, Idaho, Montana, Wyoming and Utah have been announced by Southern Pacific company as an inducement to winter travel to that state. Under the plan tickets will be sold in Idaho, Oregon and Wyoming on January 25 and 26 and in Montana January 26. Excursion fare tickets from Ogden and Salt Lake City and intermediate Utah points will be on sale January 25 and 26.

Mrs. Ella Houghton Quirk

Mrs. Ella Florence Houghton Quirk, late of Deham, Mass., died at Glencullen January 19th. She was the daughter of George and Agnes Houghton, (deceased) sister of Joseph and George, (deceased) mother of Ann, John, Catherine and Rose, grandmother of Little Norman. W. E. Pegg was in charge of funeral arrangements which were held Friday January 24th at 10 a. m. at Beaverton.

O. E. to Extend Line In Valley to Woods

It is practically an assured fact that the Oregon Electric Railway Company will extend its line up the valley to Woods, thus unquestionably increasing the amount of freight business that will be handled over this section of the line. It is understood that the Southern Pacific company has surrendered its rights in this respect to enable the O. E. to put its line in. The fifty miles of road required to connect with the Great Northern is estimated to cost $9,000,000.

Farmhands on Stilts

The English hop vines grow 18 or 20 feet high, being trained on strings, and in order to get the best results the vines must be carefully watched and trained along these supports. This work is done by men who move about on stilts in order that they may readily reach the vine tops. The stilts are fastened to the waist and belted to them at the waist which leaves their hands free. The men become very proficient in their movements about the fields.
