Sentimental Messages
Sentiment expressed on early valentines prove that the gentleman then meant the words he inscribed or that breach of promise suits weren't as customary as they are today. The wise young man of 1850 is satisfied with "To my sweetheart" inscribed on a large, red heart filled with chocolates, but a message inscribed in 1885 read as follows: "To my friend: The charm that best can sweeten life is found to be a faithful wife; the wife I seek—good, kind, and true—love whispers I shall find in you."

FARM REMINDERS

Oregon's export market for dairy products is becoming more discriminating as to quality.

A half million forest and shade trees are now being grown by Oregon and the federal government for free distribution to Oregon farmers who desire them to establish wood lots, shelter belts, or for landscape purposes, according to a new state pamphlet "Tree Planting on Oregon Farms," written by George W. Peavy, dean of forestry at Oregon State college.

Fifty-six pounds of burned lime is equivalent to 74 pounds of hydrated lime, or 100 pounds of ground limestone, according to the Oregon Experiment station.

No control of scab disease of pears can be expected from spraying during the dormant season, says the Oregon Experiment station. Recommendation for control of this disease are two sprayings in the spring before blossoming and two or three in the spring after blossoming, using ordinary liquid lime-sulfur in strengths recommended in the spraying program bulletin available at the station. As old leaves are practically the only source of infection in the spring, it is essential that they be plowed under sometime before the buds begin to break in the spring.

Fowls which develop leg weakness and do not show a marked improvement within a few days are best disposed of, say the Oregon Experiment station.

HOME POINTERS

The wise woman of advancing years gives quite as much attention to her appearance as her daughter.

Ease of housekeeping is always more likely to follow in the wake of the system of management which provides a place for every pot and pan, for every garment, or any other utensil or piece of equipment.

A good place for a pretty garden or lawn is where mother can enjoy it from the kitchen window.

One of the greatest conveniences in any clothes closet is a shoe shelf placed above the base board so that shoes may be reached with less stooping and also may be kept off the floor of the closet.

A long spring with a radiant bulb attached to the pull of the old-fashioned light in the bath room makes the turning off of the light more interesting to the children and less likely, therefore, to be forgotten.

When proper places are provided for personal equipment, it is much easier to teach children the important lesson of putting away articles as soon as they are through with them.
