AMERICAN CONVENIENCES

Electric and gas ranges are generally replacing the woodstove and oil-burner. Western growth in these conveniences shows larger volume than in the east, compared on a population ratio. In America, also, sales of electric lamps last year broke all records, with a grand total of more than six hundred million sold. Present electric lamp prices, it is estimated, averaged less than half what they sold for before the world war.

Butter consumption increased about three million pounds in January in response to low prices and widespread campaigns in favor of dairy products. Some observers believe this trend will be continued. There is also a possibility that production will be temporarily curtailed through less intensive feeding. The present potato market is likened by market observers to that of three years ago when stocks of old potatoes were light and prices held firm until the new crop was ready in volume. The preliminary survey of growers' intentions indicates that the country-wide acreage will be increased six per cent this year.

Douglas Fir Passes Rigid Test at U. of O.

Douglas fir timbers, after 53 years service in Hayden bridge, near Eugene, were found not only to equal new timbers in strength, but were actually stronger, when tested by E. H. McAllister, professor of mechanics at the University of Oregon. Here Prof. McAllister is shown with the machine which is exerting thousands of pounds of pressure down on the fir beam.

University of Oregon, Eugene.—Douglas fir timbers, after 53 years of service, were found not only to equal new timbers in strength, but were actually stronger, it is stated by E. H. McAllister, professor of mechanics at the University of Oregon, who has completed a research investigation on material taken from Hayden Bridge, a structure erected near Eugene in 1874. The timbers in the bridge were found to be in an excellent state of preservation, and Professor McAllister's conclusion is that Douglas fir can be preserved in sound structural condition for at least half a century by the simple expedient of covering from weather and providing for a free circulation of air.

More than 200 tests, on machines which exert from 50,000 to 200,000 pounds pressure, were made on the old timbers, while for basis of comparison similar tests were made on both green and seasoned pieces of the same size. Although some of the timbers that went into construction of the bridge would not be acceptable as bridge material under modern grading rules, the average strength was found to be in excess of the average strength of new timber in green condition, while in most cases it was well above the average for seasoned timber that had been air dried for two or three years.
