CLEAN UP-FIX UP

By Zella Wigent

When nature is greening up things and making them burst into new life, it is natural for us to turn to cleaning up and fixing the farm place.

Many cities and towns have at this time of year a "Clean-Up Week." It would be well if the spirit back of this movement could be extended to every farm home in the country.

A little boy in a thickly settled city section once said, "We've got an automobile now, so we've gotta keep the back yard clean."

Thank heaven the people of the country have more space but sometimes when we look about we wish that some folks didn't have quite so much of all creation to litter up.

A good general cleaning up is the first step necessary to beautify many a front or back yard.

Just as it is easier to keep a room tidy if there is a waste paper basket handy, so it is easier to keep the back yard and the farm yard free from litter, if there is a big wire incinerator in which trash can be placed until enough has collected for burning.

Such an incinerator can be purchased at a reasonable price or one can be improvised by fastening wire chicken netting to some upright iron rods driven into the ground.

One kind of fire insurance is to clean up all the combustible trash about the house and farm.

Many a place has good natural beauty of trees and shrubs but the beauty is lost when viewed over weeds and debris.

Again we see farm homes with no natural beauty but with well placed shrubs and vines, neat walks, closely clipped lawn, and general neat appearance.

They win our admiration. Beautifying the farm home grounds is not so much a matter of money as it is a matter of thought.

Clean up all the litter. Tear down the discarded farm machinery and sell the old iron.

Clear out the weed patches. Tear down old pens, fences, and buildings that have served their time.

Fix up all out-buildings that are still in use. Use paint generously. Paint is cheaper than letting the buildings weather.

Select paint colors with care, so that the buildings tone in with the landscape.

Clean up-Fix up-Beautify.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Reeling and daughter Jean, expect to go to California in the near future to make their home.
