Holland's Two Capitals
Amsterdam is the legal capital of The Netherlands; The Hague is the actual capital. In other words, the Dutch constitution recognizes Amsterdam as the only legal capital, while The Hague is the seat of government and the regular residence of the sovereign. The constitution provides that the sovereign must spend at least eight days each year in Amsterdam, and all royal baptisms, marriages and coronations must take place in the city.

"Why we bring FOUR MILLION DOLLARS to Oregon every year"

...by JOHN W. PARKER

Vice President and General Manager, Portland Vegetable Oil Mills

HORSE SENSE SERIES...NO. 2

"WE could just as well operate our coconut oil mill in any other coast city. Our raw product—copra—comes from the tropics. Our 4 million dollar annual sales are made to soap manufacturers and others all over this country, Canada, and Mexico.

"But we built our plant in Portland for two main reasons. Those same reasons made it possible to merge the plant profitably last year with Durkee Famous Foods Company. We built in Portland and we stay in Portland because this city is a natural gateway to the Orient, source of our raw copra.

"And the other reason is that Oregon power rates are low and they will be still lower as time goes on. A year and a half ago our rates were voluntarily reduced, saving us more than $9,000 on our mill's annual power bill. Our power cost per ton of copra we crush, is the lowest of the United States and Philippine Is. mills. Though our mill is entirely electric powered, the cost is but 8% of our total expense and but 1/2% of our annual business. We're glad to contribute a big industry to Oregon. We want to see Oregon and Portland grow. It will—if Oregon keeps the doors of opportunity open.

"Because Portland has a better geographical location than many other Northwest cities, it has grown more rapidly. We are fortunate in having cheap power, with rates and profits controlled by the State. And we are fortunate in Oregon, that an industry so large and important to all of us as the privately owned power companies, can do business with a reasonable assurance of profit. The privately owned power companies share our tax burden and develop the country so that they may grow as every Oregon business deserves to grow.

"We would resent any move by the government to 'take over' our factory or build competing plants alongside of us. The power companies have an equal reason for resenting such a move. If our states or cities could do a better job than the private companies are doing I'd be for municipal ownership. But common sense tells every one of us that politics would creep in—to the damage of Oregon's future growth. What makes Oregon great is the boundless opportunity to succeed in any honest, well run business. Let's keep it great!"

John W. Parker

When industrialists, merchants, bankers, farmers, and civic leaders join in advising that municipal ownership can do nothing for the benefit of Oregon and can only serve to eliminate sound private enterprises, it seems to be good horse sense to join in their beliefs. We nearly all live from the profits of private enterprises of some sort. Pacific Northwest Public Service Co. ("Pepco")
