HOME MAKERS PLAN FALL RADIO CLUBS

Homemakers of Oregon who follow the adventures of Aunt Sammy in her afternoon chats over the state college radio station, KOAC, have been invited to join a Radio club to follow a new series of programs just beginning on child care and training.

The series of lectures arranged deals with subjects on which parents are constantly asking questions. The talks will be given by specialists of the home economics department on alternate Tuesdays beginning October 7. The lecture topics will be as follows:

- October 7—What Makes a Good Dad and Mother?
- Oct. 21—How Can You Teach Desirable Habits?
- Nov. 4—What Do You Do When Your Child Says "I won't?"
- Nov. 18—Can Children be Taught to Eat What They Should?
- Dec. 2—How Can You Guide in Sex Education?

Dec. 16—How Can You Teach Care of Belongings?

Any existing club may enroll for these programs or any group of homemakers may form a club for the purpose, the station officials announce. The only obligation the local group has is to hold its meetings where there is a radio and to send in a report immediately following each meeting on a blank provided.

It is suggested that the clubs meet from 2 to 4 o'clock, following a program sent from the station for the first hour. At 3 o'clock KOAC will come on the air with the lecture for that day by Mrs. Sarah Matt Prentiss, outstanding specialist in child care and training at the college. Enrollment blanks and other details of the plan may be had by writing to Aunt Sammy at Station KOAC, Corvallis.

An alternate series of lectures on the other Tuesdays is also provided for those clubs which care to have a member listen in and report at the regular meeting. These cover seven other related subjects.

DALLAS—Although it has long been considered necessary to keep men in the silo to pack and distribute the ensilage as it was blown in a number of Polk county farmers have been getting good results in recent years by tramping or packing only the very top part, according to J. R. Beck, county agent. Leonard Peterson of the Oak Point district, who used this method last year reports that he thought his silage was just as good as in former years when he had used men to tramp all of it.

HORSE SENSE SERIES . . . NO. 8

"POWER production is a competitive business everywhere. Power companies compete with each other and with private producers. Two companies here compete for our power load.

"Power is getting cheaper because its production costs are lower. Steam, generated from sawdust, oil, or cheap coal—not hot air from pseudo-politicians—is creating this result for industry and householder alike. Steam-electric power in many instances costs less and is more reliable than hydro-electric power. Our power companies make both; that's sensible.

"Oregon wants new industries, especially woodworking and furniture factories, to manufacture Oregon's greatest raw material, Lumber. Power is not the major factor in attracting these industries because modern woodworking factories may produce their own power.

"As a result of mass production methods, however, the power companies are able to produce power at a lower cost than the woodworking factories.

"Here in Portland our company has more favorable power and shipping facilities than our competitors in Eastern cities. Community cooperation will make these benefits known.

"Our power companies pay millions of dollars in wages and taxes. Invariably they buy Oregon products, if available. They support Chambers of Commerce, On-to-Oregon. They work for the State; they are good servants. They live and let live. If everyone else did as much, happy days would come again.

"What we need more than anything else is 'Oregon Spirit—a willingness to pull together to make ALL Oregon industries prosperous. Don't fear down; BUILD UP!"

Percy A. Smith

Oregon's greatness is in its clear thinking leaders—our business men who have made Oregon better known, who have added to Oregon's wealth and prosperity. They have the interests of the state at heart.

And when they speak out every citizen deserves to hear what they have to say. For this reason, we are publishing Mr. Smith's views on a question which affects you as much as it does this company. Pacific Northwest Public Service Co. ("Pepco")
