BOOSTING FOR BEAVERTON
AND THE TUALATIN VALLEY

DEWEY

THE PLUMBER

BEAVERTON, OREGON

Do you realize that plumbing, like so many other things in the life of today, has undergone many changes? And that we have kept pace with the modern trend in plumbing and heating That we have built up a substantial business only because we have kept pace with this modern trend?

SKILLED PLUMBING AND HEATING
KOHLER OF KOHLER FIXTURES
MEADOWS WASHING MACHINES
ALLEN AND VECTO CIRCULATING HEATERS
FAIRBANKS MORSE HOME WATER SYSTEMS

"Our Work Speaks For Itself"

More than 20 far-seeing home-owners in this section have installed the new Fairbanks-Morse Home Water System. This gives them a ready supply of water at a cost that is scarcely worth mentioning. May we tell you, how you can have this system installed—at such small cost?

WELCOME TO THE MOST PROMISING
SECTION IN THE NORTHWEST—BEAVERTON

A modern poultry house which are numerous in this section

In the territory immediately adjacent to Beaverton and Aloha there are found some of the most successful poultry farms in the northwest. Climate and solid conditions are just right for high egg production and the production of the proper food.

Every modern appliance, building and methods are in use by the many poultry men. It does not require a large expenditure of money or many acres of land for one to enter this business.

Splendid market facilities are offered. It is not unusual for eggs produced in this section to bring a 5cper dozen premium in New York.

The majority of hens are White Leghorns which have proven well adapted to this section. There are several growers with hens that have produced 300 eggs in a year.

Riley Successful Gardener Widely Known Grower Of Horse Radish

"Back in Kansas, where I gardened for a good many years, I never knew in the mornings if I would have a crop in the evenings—so I came to Oregon," said I. L. Riley, widely known gardner of Tualatin Valley. "In the 20 years that I have raised garden truck here I have had lots of hard times but never a complete crop failure. This should convince you that I am sold on this section as one of the finest garden spots in the United States. Right now I wouldn't trade a half acre of good Tualatin Valley soil for half of my native, Atchison County, Kansas."

The Riley farm is located at Fanno Station about two miles southeast of Beaverton. There are 42 acres in the farm, 15 of which are under cultivation. This, however, does not tell the story. This narrative might begin with the time that Mr. Riley bought his present farm about eight years ago. The "farm" then was rich in brush and timber Scarcely an acre that did not need to be cleared. Mr. Riley began a grueling battle with the brush and worked so many long, hard hours that even he does not like to think about it. His tenacity won out. Year by year he had more land available for the propigation of his garden.

Shortly after he had a few acres ready to seed, he decided to experiment with horse radish. He knew that some of the finest horse radish in the world was raised in the Tualatin Valley, but he wasn't sure what to do with his crop once he had raised it and harvested it. The answer came soon. By a coincidence he hit upon a method of getting his crop ready for market. He bottled some of the output and launched it upon the market. Soon he was surprised to know that the demand for his product was great Everywhere requests began coming in, until the demand exceeded the output. Today, Mr. Riley has difficulty supplying the stores in the northwest. His product is placed on the Yamhill Market and is in great demand. It is also shipped to various points throughout this area He plans on devoting more time to this within the next few years and hopes eventually to build up a national market for Riley's Pure Horse Radish.

But the gardner does not limit his work to horse radish alone He raises some of the finest beans and tomatoes that can be found anywhere. This year he had more than 3000 poles of beans, while his tomatoe yield has been heavy. While he is busy handling the growing of his produce his wife is equally busy selling the produce in the Riley stand on the Yamhill Market.

The Riley home is one of the most modern and inviting of appearance in this section.

After coming out from Kansas the Rileys lived in Portland for a time and spent five or six years in Progress. Now they are thoroughly satisfied in their present location and going to keep on working and developing their acreage.

Mr. Riley is an enthusiastic booster for the Tualatin Valley and feels that this is one of the most promising sections in the entire United States. In his own words—"This is the garden spot of the world."

Beaverton—where life is so much better.

* * *

The Beaverton district boasts of more modern acreage homes than any other like locality in the state. You, too, should own your home in this beautiful valley.

* * *

The world's markets are open to the Tualatin Valley producers. It is only a short drive to the Portland docks where ships from every land are found. There is a market for all produced in this fertile section.

* * *

Corn is a reliable forage crop It is grown for silage and also is ripened for winter feed. The yield is heavy and there is never a failure.

* * *

Land values are low in the Tualatin valley.

You have every city advantage and none of its vexious problems in the Tualatin valley. It is the garden spot of the west.

* * *

There are some of the most beautiful oak trees in the world in the Tualatin valley.

* * *

You are only 15 minutes from the business district of Portland at Beaverton.

WATER---

Nature's Most Priceless Gift to Farming

Only through well irrigated lands can you hope for profitable specialized farming—can you look forward to bumper crops that mean prosperity.

If nature hasn't given your land that vital supply of water let us tell you about the advantages and comparitively small cost

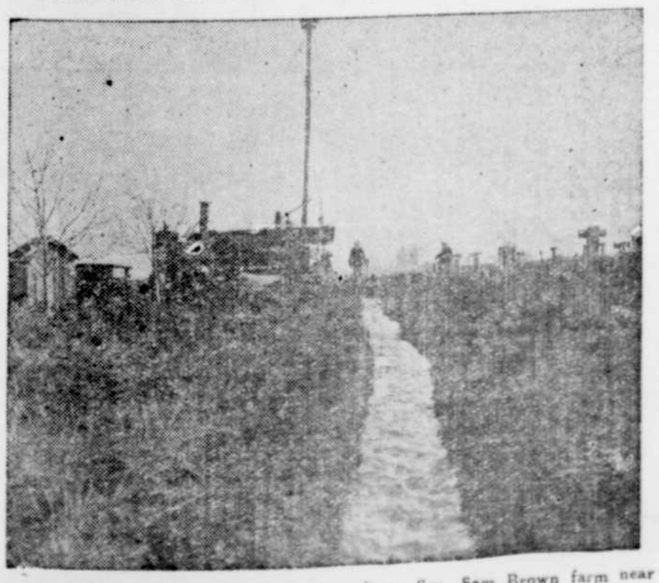
A. M. Jannsen Well Drilling Co.

Phone Beaverton 0652 R. F. D. No. 1
BEAVERTON OREGON

ANY KIND OF DRILLING ANYWHERE

Here is some of the work we have done—

DRILLING ALL NEW PORTLAND BRIDGES
TEST BORINGS AND SOUNDINGS FOR U. S. GOV.
EXPERIMENTAL WELL FOR OREGON STATE COLLEGE
Hundreds of Wells Throughout the Northwest



This flow brought from experimental well on Sen. Sam Brown farm near Salem. Note typical Jannsen machine.

BOOSTING FOR THAT WHICH WILL HELP IN THE
UPBUILDING OF THE TUALATIN VALLEY

DEVOTED TO THE
UPBUILDING OF BEAVERTON

I. L. RILEY

BEAVERTON, OREGON
GROWER——MANUFACTURER
AND DISTRIBUTOR OF

Riley's Pure Horseradish

Here is a horse radish that is delightfully different—a horse radish with a strength and flavor and tange all of its own.

You've never known the best in horse radish until you've used RILEY'S PURE HORSE RADISH.

Available in Portland only at Market Stall No. 335. It's worth going after.

INSIST ON RILEY'S PURE HORSE RADISH

EVER FOR THE BEST INTERESTS
AND THE TUALATIN VALLEY

Senator Earl E. Fisher Prominent Throughout State of Oregon

In Senator Earl E. Fisher Beaverton has one of the most prominent legislators in Oregon. Senator or rather Earl as he prefers to be called was raised in Beaverton, the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Fisher. His father was a noted politician and a very aggressive booster for Beaverton and the Tualatin Valley.

Earl Fisher attended the Beaverton grade school and then completed a course at the Portland Business College. Graduating from that institution he took up teaching. His first school was the primary school in Beaverton. He then taught in several of the rural schools returning to be principal of the Beaverton grade school in 1916 to 1918. Earl then taught in other schools being principal in several until 1928 when he temporarily retired.

In commenting on teaching Earl said, "I enjoyed the work. I made many fast friends, friends that have remained true and steadfast for years He said, "I consider teaching one of the most important professions and one gets on intimate terms with the future rulers of the country."

Earl Fisher is a very industrious and hard working man. Besides teaching school during the winter months from 1912 to 1914 he edited and printed the Beaverton Owl, a publication that was deeply appreciated by the people, one that added to the prestige of Beaverton and the Tualatin Valley. Finding the two duties too laborious Earl disposed of the Owl in 1914 to Mr. Hicks.

Earl's first elective office was mayor of Beaverton in 1906, he served so well and made such remarkable administrative officer that he was re-elected for 1907 and 1908.

Earl was elected representative in Washington county in 1920, he did not seek a second term, though urged by his friends to do so. He made a fine record as a representative of the common people.

In 1928 Earl surprised many of his intimate friends when he was elected joint senator from Washington, Yamhill, Lincoln and Tillamook counties. He carried every precint but one in Washington county, a most remarkable achievement.

In the senate Earl was appointed on the following committees: roads and highways, education, agriculture, fisheries, election privilges, pharmacy and was chairman of the public lands committee, four of these were the most important committees in the senate. Earl made a valient fight against the school book trust, his bill seeking relief for parents from this costly monopoly was passed by a large vote in the senate but killed in the house.

Senator Earl E. Fisher serving Washington, Lincoln, Tillamook and Yamhill Counties.

Earl is deeply interestd in the Tualatin tunnel and is now planning legislation that will make the construction possible. That he will accomplish this is a foregone conclusion as he is a hard worker, deep student and an experienced legislator.

Earl, two years ago, became interested in pen raised muskrats and has a large number now in his pens. "It is more economical and less hazardus to raise these animals in pens than in swamps and the future will see more and more growers raising these animals by this method." Being industrious he also raises four acres of horse radish. His crop is very good this year. He also raises some garlic. Earl also has established a wide reputation for his dill pickles and has been unable to supply the demand.

Earl Fisher is a very public spirited man. He is always eager and willing to lay aside his duties and devote his time and energy to the public's welfare. He has accomplished much for Beaverton, Washington county and Oregon. Earl Fisher is a fast friend, loyal to his home and country and upstanding, upright citizen and Beaverton and Washington county are justly proud of him and his achievements.

Come to the rich Tualatin Valley Opportunity awaits you here. Everything in this valley goes to make life more profitable and more worthwhile. Productive soil, ideal climatic conditions, proximity to the Portland market, beautiful homes and churches and schools—everything you want to realize the greater comforts of life. Write to the Beaverton Chamber of Commerce or the Kiwanis club for more detailed information about the fastest growing, most properous section in the new west.

* * *

Beaverton—A Live City