whispered: "Local color—how do you like it? You ought to get a real kick as the Americans say, out of this." "I don't like it," I whispered back...

back! And I want to go home!" I sobbed. "And Altiyo? I owe him a lot, too. If he hadn't shown his real character that last evening, I would have gone back to South Africa a discontented, unhappy wife. It was Altiyo, after all, who showed me how hollow are the frivolities of life, and taught me the true value of the devotion of a good man like Terry."
