For awhile she was silent with eyes downcast, then she spoke hesitantly with a soft and wistful expression. "I think—I'll be waiting for you always."
"I will go back; I will do anything now," I assured her.
The next morning I went to my employer and explained everything to him telling him of my intention to return.
"You don't think I am blind do you?" he asked, his face beaming.
"I recognized you the day I saw your picture in the paper."
"And remember this," he assured me "when you come back your position will be waiting for you."

I started East immediately. The thought of going back and spending more years behind iron bars and gray walls now was more pleasant than it had been before; but the knowledge that I now had something to hope for to look forward to took away the unbearableness.

When I arrived at the prison and submitted myself to the authorities they stared in blank incredulity making no effort to conceal their astonishment at my voluntary return.

But they in turn informed me of something which astonished me. If I had remained, I would now be a free man, they told me; for in six months from the time I had escaped I was to have been pardoned. However, they told me that if I would serve those remaining six months they would liberate me. You can imagine my joy on hearing this most gratifying and pleasing piece of news.

Those six months passed quickly, so quickly that they could in no way be compared with the other weary plodding ones I had spent there. At the end of the short stay I returned to the west coast and my sweetheart, who, true to her word, was waiting faithfully for me.

Had it not been for those sufferings, I probably never would have met the one who is now my cherished wife and the peace and happiness which I now enjoy might all have been lost.

SPLINTERS

She—I've just read that a man out in the West exchanged his wife for a horse. You wouldn't exchange me for a horse, would you, dear?

He—Of course not; but I'd hate to have any one tempt me with a darned good car.

Makes Your House Look Like New at a Very Small Cost

Are you dissatisfied with the appearance of your house? Is it old-fashioned—ugly—out of step with the times or the neighborhood? You can have it remodeled and improved at small cost. Let us estimate on the materials we can help you a lot.

Shopper (showing black eye)—Look what I just got in your lingerie department.

Floorwalker (languidly)—Beautiful, isn't it? Pay at the desk, please.

It's a wise man who takes advantage of the present low cost of building material and labor. Now, if ever, is the time to build. Come in and let us show you the free plans we have to offer and give you an estimate on your building or remodeling job. You'll be surprised how low our figures will be.

We have a complete stock of Fullers' Paints.
